INDUSTRY TO PLACE NEW PLANT IN GLENDALE

Western American Concrete Company Buys Tract, To Erect Factory

By RALPH A. LYND
Of The Evening News Staff.

Establishment of another important industry in Glendale is assured by the announcement that the Western American Concrete Company, that is now located at 1147 Glendale boulevard, Los Angeles, has purchased a site of a little more than an acre in extent on South San Fernando road and plans to move its plant to Glendale immediately.

The site selected, which lies just off Riverside drive and was the property of George R. Miller, was purchased through Barlow & Hoopes, 117 West Broadway, for a consideration of $16,500, the deal being handled by Charles T. Barrows, a salesman for the firm.

Wood and Concrete

The Western American Concrete company is the designer and builder of what is known as the Woodlock Concrete block houses, a process which combines wood and concrete in the construction of buildings and which, it is claimed, results in economy in building costs and produces a structure that is characterized by extreme durability.

"The rapid growth of Glendale," says Frank Hoopes, one of the members of the firm handling the transaction, "has been the principal factor in inducing the Western American Concrete company to locate here, where the demand for houses of all kinds is so keen. The Woodlock process is said to be peculiarly adaptable for bungalow courts and it has proven so successful, both in the cities and at the beaches, that the firm decided to move to a location where there is room for expansion and where the transportation facilities are so good as they are here."

Hardwood Products

As a part of the establishment of the firm's plant here, the Western American Hardwood Products company will also be located at the same site and will devote a large part of its plant to turning out the specially designed wood members that are used in these houses. The Hardwood Products company, it is stated,

PROBERS DIG UP WAR FRAUD CASES

Committee Desires to Know About Alleged Failure to Prosecute Them

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The Wheeler-Brookhart committee today plunged into an investigation of the alleged failure of the department of justice under the administration of former Attorney-General Harry M. Daugherty to prosecute vigorously war fraud cases.

John W. H. Crim, formerly assistant attorney-general, was questioned about his activities in connection with these prosecutions. Crim is now a special assistant to the attorney-general in charge of the Veterans' bureau prosecutions.

Scores Spy System

The "spy system" of the department of justice "breeds corruption in government and imperils law enforcement," Crim charged before the committee.

Crim urged that "nine-tenths of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice should be wiped out."

DIES FROM INJURIES

LONG BEACH, May 22.—J. Trecobich, a seaman, who fell twenty feet into a hatch of the steamer Lake Frances at the San Pedro Lumber company plant in Los Angeles harbor Tuesday morning and fractured his skull, died at a local hospital.

Coolidge Sees Need Of National Revival Of Play

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Stressing the need for a revival of the play spirit in America, President Coolidge today opened the first national conference on outdoor recreation, called to devise methods of systematically developing nation-wide recreation and physical development.

Advance of civilization, the president warned, is taking the people further and further away from the active outdoor life which is so essential to the welfare of a nation.

"Our country is a land of cultured men and women," Mr. Coolidge said. "It is a land of agriculture, of industries, of schools and of places of religious worship. It is a land of varied climes and scenery, of mountain and plain, of river and lake. It is the American heritage. We must make it a land of vision, a land of work, of sincere striving for the good, but we must add to all these, in order to round out the full stature of the people, an ample effort to make it a land of wholesome enjoyment and perennial gladness.

"Side by side with the industrial plants should be the gymnasium, and the athletic field. Along with the learning of a trade by which a livelihood is to be earned should go the learning of how to participate in the activities of recreation, by which life may not only be more enjoyable, but more rounded out and complete. The country needs instruction in order that we may better secure these results.

"Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the efforts to get the children out of the alleys and off the streets into spacious places where there is good sunlight and plenty of fresh air. An opportunity has both a physical and mental effect. It restores the natural balance of life and nourishes the moral fibre of youth."

Mr. Coolidge touched particularly upon golf, tennis, fishing and hunting, baseball, football, polo and gardening, as forms of sport and recreation which will develop and better the nation.

Federal Operation Of Railways During Strike Is Proposed

WASHINGTON, May 22. — A provision for federal operation of any railroad in time of strikes was written into the Howell-Barkley bill today by a special Senate sub-committee which indorsed the amended bill to the Senate interstate commerce committee.

The anti-strike provision would give the president power to demand a federal receivership and the nearest fedral judge authority to appoint a receiver if the strike or lockout threatened to stop interstate commerce upon any railroad.

The bill also provided five successive steps for the peaceful settlement of railroad disputes including arbitration before federal boards created by the president.

REPUBLICAN PLATFORM UPSET

Action of Congress Makes Coolidge's Stand Hard Now, Says Writer

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright 1924

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Picking the next Republican presidential nominee—Calvin Coolidge—has been a simple process of organization, but writing the Republican national platform is quite a different thing, and may furnish the interesting side of the Cleveland convention.

Republican leaders began to realize today that it will require literally gymnast to draft certain planks in the national platform particularly that which relates to the soldier bonus. The Democrats, will, of course, point with pride to their record in support of the bonus and individual Republicans will enter the campaign anxious to be rewarded for their voice in Congress but how about the nominee for president who is to run on the Republican national platform? He vetoed the bonus bill and opposed the principle of the thing. Can the Republican platform uphold Congress and at the same time, omit reference to the vote by the president?

Bonus Not Forgotten

There are some leaders who think there is no necessity for any platform declaration since the bonus is an accomplished fact and that a general statement of the record on the Republican party in aid of the soldiers and sailors of the World War will be sufficient for campaign purposes. The Democrats, on the other hand, are likely to go on record in favor of a straight cash option

PROSECUTION URGED BY PROBERS

Senate Committee to Ask Suits Against Five In Daugherty Hearing

By KENNETH CLARK
For International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Criminal prosecution of at least five men who have been exposed in alleged illicit liquor deals by the Senate committee investigating former Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, will be demanded by the committee, International News learned today.

The committee already has recommended that Attorney-General Harlan F. Stone bring immediate action against Howard Mannington and William Orr. Stone told the committee in executive session that he believed "there was a legitimate case against Mannington."

Names Kept Secret

Committee members would not name the others besides Orr and Mannington against whom prosecution will be requested.

Orr, former private secretary to ex-Governor Whitman of New York, and Mannington, a close friend of Daugherty and the late Jesse Smith, were alleged to have been involved in transactions in connection with fraudulent issue of whiskey withdrawal permits. Unless present plans are changed, the committee's recommendations for prosecution will deal only with witnesses involved in liquor transactions. In view of the indictment of Tex Rickard and Jap Muma, in Newark, on charges of illegally transporting the Dempsey-Carpentier fight films, the committee contemplates no additional action along this line, it was said.

To Call Daugherty

A move to oust P. C. Todd as special assistant attorney-general in charge of the conspiracy case against Gaston Means in New York, gained strength today. W. O. Duckstein, private secretary of E. B. McLean, wealthy Washington publisher, testified that two special investigators for Todd obtained Means' valuable papers, which were stolen on March 31.

With the investigation rapidly drawing to a close, Senator Wheeler, committee prosecutor, announced that Daugherty himself will be subpoenaed as one of the last witnesses.

CLAIMS POLITICS FORCED LOCATION

Says Nitrate Plant Put at Muscle Shoals Over All Army's Protests

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The charge that political influence forced location of the government nitrate project at Muscle Shoals, Ala., over the protest of army engineers was made today by Senator Norris, Republican of Nebraska, at a hearing of the Senate agricultural committee.

Dr. C. C. Parsons, government consulting engineer, told the committee the war department experts were "unanimously agreed" the plant should have been located in southwestern Virginia or northern Tennessee.

"Why then was it located at Muscle Shoals?" asked Senator Heflin, Democrat of Alabama.

"One word explains it," Senator Norris interposed, "politics, but the least one says about that, the better."

London Professor Says Most Fatal Gas In U. S.

LONDON, May 22.—The United States has large quantities of the most deadly gas in the world for defensive purposes, according to the Daily Express.

The newspaper published an interview with Professor C. Delisle Burns of London university, charging that large quantities of this gas were being made by the United States while the Washington conference was in session.

According to Professor Burns, the new gas is invisible and odorless, and can easily be distributed from airplanes. No one who breathes it will be aware he is inhaling death, but from six to twelve hours after the fumes are inhaled the victim will die in terrible agony.

"While the Washington conference was in session on disarmament, 200 of the best young chemists in the United States were engaged at Edgewood arsenal, near Washington, in research upon the manufacture of gas, and now the United States has immense supplies of it," Professor Burns is quoted as saying.

Major Victor Lefebure, one of the world's foremost authorities upon chemical warfare, said the gas being made now was more dangerous than that being turned out in Germany at the end of the war.

"It will be possible," said Major Lefebure, "for a nation which knows the secret of a really deadly gas to put such a gas barrier around their country that for days no country could cross the frontier."

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Formal denial of charges in the British press that large quantities of poison gas are being manufactured in the United States was made by the war department today.

The following statement was issued:

"No poison gas has been manufactured at Edgewood arsenal since 1918, with the exception of a small amount of phosgene, which was produced between April and October, 1921, for the purpose of testing out a new process; and a few pounds of toxic gases produced at the laboratories for use in research work.

"About 150 pounds of toxic gases manufactured for research work covered 200 different gases, the amounts varying from twenty-five pounds, used on experimental work in testing marine piling, to five drams, in other cases.

"No funds have been appropriated since 1918 which could be used by the chemical warfare service for the building up of a gas reserve."

A throng of officials representing practically every organization in the city gathered at the local Southern Pacific station at the head of Cerritos avenue this morning to join with friends and relatives in seeing off the twenty-five Glendale people who left for Chicago on the Glendale-Burbank section of the Golden State Limited.

Bearing a banner that will advertise Glendale all along the 2000-mile run, the train pulled out at 10:20 o'clock, amid a chorus of cheers and cries of "See you again!" and "Bring back your friend!" Each passenger carried Glendale pamphlets distributed by Secretary Eugene F. Sanders of the Chamber of Commerce.

The run to Chicago will be accomplished in just sixty-eight hours, he stated, landing the passengers in the Illinois city at 9:15 o'clock Sunday morning, May 25. From that point they will spread to the four points of the compass, some going on to New York and other points on the Atlantic coast.

CONGRESS IS READY TO ADJOURN

Tax Bill Agreement Paves Way for Early Close; Harmony Prevails

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

WASHINGTON, May 22.—After wandering in the wilderness of discord and dissension for nearly six months, the turbulent sixty-eighth Congress emerged today into the sunny open spaces of comparative harmony and pointed toward certain adjournment by June 7.

The agreement on the tax bill and the promise that it will be signed by President Coolidge have magically dispelled nine-tenths of the trouble in Washington. Congress can now go home and face the electorate "pointing with pride" to the session's accomplishments.

CITY COUNCIL SPLIT OVER METHOD TO PROCEED

Discusses Fire Department And City Hall Issues For Same Time

The calling of a special bond election, to provide funds in the sum of $47,000 as requested by members of the Glendale Library board was postponed for one week by the City Council this morning, in a sharp division which brought Mayor Spencer Robinson, with Councilmen Asa Hall and Sam Davis on one side, opposing the election, and Councilmen S. S. Gilhuly and C. E. Kimlin in favor of it.

The calling of the election was opposed by Mayor Robinson and Councilman Davis on the grounds of economy. Ray L. Morrow, city attorney, furnished an estimate of the cost of a special election, which totaled $700. The mayor stated that it was not good business to submit one bond issue to the voters and then in a short time entail the same expense on another bond election.

For Fire Department

Counpcilman Hall demanded that a bond issue in the amount of $60,000 to provide additional equipment for the fire department be submitted at the same time, and the question of providing funds for an addition to the city hall was discussed, but no estimate given of the proposed cost.

Councilman Gilhuly stated in open meeting that the council had stated to members of the library board in committee of the whole that the call would be issued and that "he did not propose to flop now that they were in open session."

"I have analyzed the facts and I know, and you gentlemen ought to know, that a bond issue to provide funds for the fire department and an addition to the city hall will not carry at this time," stated Councilman Kimlin.

Takes Different View

Councilman Hall took the opposite view, stating that in his opinion all merchants would work for the issue.

After a lengthy discussion, Councilman Kimlin moved, seconded by Councilman Gilhuly, that the election be called. Councilman Hall moved an amendment to the motion, providing that the matter be laid over one week. The amendment was seconded by Councilman Davis.

The amendment carried, Mayor Robinson, Councilmen Hall and has developed a large business in wood turnings of all kinds for the furniture and novelty trade, and with its modern automatic turning machines it will be able to take care of a large volume of business and give employment to a number of men. Present estimates place the initial number of employes in the new firm at twenty-five men.

Plans for the factory are now being prepared, and as soon as these are completed a permit will be sought for its erection. Machinery to the value of $50,000 will be shipped in here and will be delivered early in June, and every effort will be made to have the plant in running order shortly after that, to care for the orders that are already on the books.

Several Glendale people have become associated with the enterprise, among them being F. T. Bower, Clifton Clark and Fulton B. Jewell, and George Plies, a Los Angeles business man, and W. HONOR MEMORY OF MRS. GIBSON AT P.-T. A. MEET

Picture In Music Room to Keep Loved Teacher In Members' Thoughts

Tribute to the memory of the late Mrs. Dora L. Gibson, for fourteen years head of the music department of the Glendale Union High school, was most impressively paid yesterday afternoon at the meeting of the Parent-Teacher association at Havard High school, where the Parent-Teacher association company stood in silence, and later saw a picture, to be hung in the music room at the new high school in Mrs. Gibson's memory.

Mrs. Gibson seemed specially near to the Parent-Teacher association, for she was most gracious and generous in providing talent for the meetings. In appreciation for this service a committee of the Parent-Teacher association members called on her shortly before her sudden death to ask what they might do to express their gratefulness.

No decision was reached at the conference with Mrs. Gibson, and ere the matter was completed her sudden death occurred.

"Song of Ages"

So the committee selected the picture, "Song of Ages," by Ethel Wright, to be hung in the music room at the new high school. The frame of the picture will bear a metal plate with memorial inscription. Members of the picture committee were Mesdames S. L. Martinez, E. B. Moore, C. H. Ambrosch and Percy Priaulx.

At the meeting yesterday afternoon Mrs. Pierson Hanning, vice-president, presided in the absence of the president Mrs. C. H. Whitney, who is in Topeka, Kan., where she was called by the serious illness of her father.

It was the final meeting of the year, and was featured by reports and the election of officers.

Mrs. George U. Moyse, as chairman of the nominating committee, including Mesdames Case, Johnson, Heustis and Priaulx, presented her report, which was unanimously adopted.

Officers Elected

Officers elected are Mrs. W. R. Wichert, president; Mrs. S. L. Martinez, vice-president; Mrs. B. L. Cline, secretary; Mrs. R. C. Horner, treasurer; Mrs. Case, historian; Mrs. Percy Priaulx, auditor.

During the meeting it was announced that the Parent-Teacher association is to pay honor to the 1924 football team by presenting each member with a framed picture of the team. These pctures have been secured by a special committee and artistically and expensively framed.

Mrs. R. C. Horner's annual report as treasurer showed a balance of $55. This report was approved by Mrs. Cline, auditor.

Reports of other officers and chairmen were presented in a most concise manner by Mrs. W. A. Kulp, historian.

From the auditorium the Parent-Teacher association members went out onto the portico, where they joined other parents for a May Day program given by the pupils of the ninth grade.

To Miss Lillian Shattuck, head of the girls' physical education department, and her assistants, Misses Hoberman and Carrie Baillard, much praise is due for the splendid demonstration of the

The Western Rangers has been established on the Pacific Cost by western men and has a program devised particularly for western boys. Their form of organization has been adopted from the old tribal form of aboriginal Indians.

TRAINS TO EAST CARRY HUNDREDS OF GLENDALIANS

Traffic on All Lines Taxes Equipment to Limit Agents Declare

An unprecedented demand for accommodations to all eastern points has been experfenced by local ticket offices with the opening of the tourist season today. Many Glendale people are leaving today and during the rest of the week on vacation and business trips to eastern and mid-western districts.

The number of people leaving today totals over 150, according to figures of the Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Santa Fe local ticket offices. The Glendale ticket agents report that practically the entire Pullman accommodations on all eastbound trains were sold out today and many of the transcontinental trains ran several extra sections to accmomodate the rush from the Southern California territory.

Incoming traffic is much heavier, with all roads running extra equipment to handle the thousands of easterners taking advantage of the tourist rates to visit California. The vanguard of the easterners arrived Sunday and have been pouring into Los Angeles and vicinity in a steady stream since then.

Fifty Choose U. P.

The Glendale Union Pacific ticket office reports over fifty Glendale residents leaving today over their line alone. The Los Angeles Limited was composed of five sections with all reservations taken. The train contained a total of thirty-two sleepers.

Union Pacific train No. 26, the Continental Limited, ran three extra sections. One section composed of six sleepers is being run straight through to St. Louis, with only St. Louis and Kansas City people on the train. Mr. Redmond of the local office reports that all trains east will run extra sections for the remainder of the week.

The California Limited on the Santa Fe line is running in seven sections of seven cars each, the first train leaving at 11:30 and a section following every ten minutes. The Navajo, leaving at 8:45 a. m., ran in three sections, and the Missionary, leaving at 5 p. m., is running in two sections.

Low Rates Appeal

The Santa Fe agent reports that the tourist travel from Glendale is very heavy this year. The company announces that this season has brought an increased business of approximately 30 per cent over that of last year. Four thousand people came into Southern California over the Santa Fe line on last Sunday.

A. J. Rehwold, traveling passenger agent for the Southern Pacific company, states that the low summer tourist rates have been the cause of a heavy demand for reservations over that road. Because of the large number of Glendale people leaving for the east today the Southern Pacific company ran two special cars from Glendale direct to Chicago. The Glendale cars left at 10:05 a. m. as a section of the Golden State Limited.

Mr. Rehwold declares that the rush this year was much greater than ever before and offers as an explanation the rapid growth of Glendale and surrounding territory. Ticket agents report that practically all tickets sold are for round trips.

Graham Crackers

By F. A. GRAHAM

Good evening, my nice family of nieces—oh, beg pardon! That column goes over on the woman's page. What we meant to start today's session with is this: WHO PUT THE TEN IN TENT?

Glendale may soon lose a well-known amusement structure. That is, tent-atively speaking, of course.

Mayor Robinson says that "you can't build a city with tents! It can't be done, with any degree of con-tent.

"Burbank Man, Kicked By Horse, To Recover," sayeth the headline. Maybe he sat on the funny paper and Spark Plug didn't like it.

McTalkolotzky, prominent member of the Jawbone society, rises in open meeting to inquire if the proclamation of a "Cleanup Week" in Los Angeles was inspired by the arrival of so many tourists.

Since the Prince of Wales has taken so many falls from horses his royal parents have become alarmed. They recently ordered him off the dance floor at a ball. Evidently they have decided that he is not to be trusted even on his own calves.

"War on Mealy Bug Is Urged" headline,...We confess ignorance of just what a mealy bug is, but if it is the one that drops in to visit right at dinner tme, let us have war.

Certain political factions of Los Angeles claim that a reminder of the approach of municipal elections is given in this headline: "Vacation Near for Mayor Cryer."

Construction Along Brand Boulevard Mounts Up as Time Progresses

The best summer in the history of Glendale real estate is predicted by J. A. Endicott, realtor, of 116 South Brand boulevard, who declares that the large amount of construction under way along Brand boulevard is but the beginning of a strong activity in business properties that will be felt in the coming weeks.

This activity will communicate itself rapidly to residential properties, he declares, with the result that the summer and fall will witness such a growth as even Glendale has never before seen.

The slight lull of the spring was the best thing that could have happened to curb speculation and stabilize values, he feels. Big business interests that have been watching Glendale closely have pronounced the city "sound," according to Mr. Endicott, and large investments are in prospect, with transfer of many important properties and subsequent major building operations.

Makes Statement on Tent Show Petition

Editor The Evening News—In regard to a statement made by Councilman Sam Davis which appeared in Tuesday's issue of The Glendale Evening News, stating that only one property owner in the vicinity of the tent show was opposed to it, I wish to make this correction: In the official minutes of the City Council which were published in the Friday issue of The News, a petition was read to the council asking the removal of the tent show. Now this petition was signed by a goodly number of the property owners and residents in the immediate vicinity of the tent show.

Councilman C. E. Kimlin perhaps received his information through this source, which is correct.

Mass Meeting To Hear Plan To Aid Industry

A mass meeting will be held in the Harvard High school auditorium on Wednesday night, June 4, when the general public will be told of the great Southern California movement to "keep the white spot white" by President Harry H. Merrick of the Greater Los Angeles association, Rex B. Goodcell, collector of internal revenue, Morgan Wood and other forceful speakers.

Charles B. Guthrie, chairman of the local committee, and a founder and vice-president of the association, will preside.

This announcement is made by the publicity committee, appointed at the close of the informal meeting held in the editorial rooms of the new Glendale Evening News building on Tuesday night, May 20. The committee comprises L. H. Myers, chairman; Chalmer D. Day, W. S. Ingram and George R. Beaton.

Those who have heard Rex B. Goodcell talk know what an inspiration it is, Mr. Myers points out. He has at his fingertips, through his official position of feeling the financial pulse of the southwest, a wealth of highly optimistic facts and figures concerning this section of the country, and can predict its future and tell its needs as few other men are in a position to do.

Morgan Wood, who spoke at the meeting in The Glendale Evening News office Tuesday night, is a particularly forceful and moving speaker, who is able to make concrete the aims and objects of the Greater Los Angeles association, in all their phases, states Mr. Myers.

President Harry H. Merrick of the association enjoys a reputation as a successful business man and limelight figure in southern California affairs that makes his appearance on the platform always an event of significance, the local publicity committee feels.

It is planned to, in short, make Wednesday night, June 4, one of the most memorable in the history of Glendale.

Chair Trick Causes Girl's Damage Suit

LOS ANGELES, May 22.—Dorothy Cummings, 15, seeks $10,000 damages from Edna Zadduck Clayton, a fellow high school student, and the latter's parents, through a suit on file here today in which Miss Cummings claims she was injured when Miss Clayton playfully pulled a chair from under her and she fell to the floor. The prank is said to have been perpetrated in a class room at Norwalk Union High school.

ONE KILLED IN AUTO ACCIDENT ON RIDGE ROUTE

John Straight, Oregon City, Dead; Car Plunges Over Bank 150 Feet High

Constable Pilcher, of San Fernando and deputy sheriffs today made a thorough investigation into the automobile accident late yesterday on the Ridge route grade which resulted in the death of John Straight, chief electrician of the Hawley Paper Mills, of Oregon City, Ore., and minor injuries to Earle Brownley, of the Oregon City Banner-Courier. The accident happened a mile and a half north of Castaic.

According to meager information obtainable today of the accident, the car in which Straight was riding with Brownley, plunged over the grade and tumbled down a 150 foot incline.

Were on Way Home

W. P. Hawley is said to have been leading the Oregon party and upon noticing his companions were not trailing him turned back, thinking they had motor trouble. After driving a short distance Hawley found Brownley climbing up the embankment. Straight's body was removed to San Fernando.

The automobile party, it was learned, were returning to Portland after a trip through the southwest that took them into Mexico.

A simple contrivance which, after the door has been locked, locks the inserted key in such a manner to the knob that a burglar is unable to push it out or turn it, has been invented.

STAMP OUT THESE RUMORS

The foot and mouth disease is serious chiefly in one way—and that is in the greatly exaggerated reports it seems to circulate back east. There are always a certain number of rumormongers who like nothing better than to start some unsavory or sensational story, and then sit back perfectly happy while it gains damaging momentum.

It is the duty of every resident of Southern California to sit down at once and answer all letters or reports from the east that bear evidence of this unfortunate misinformation. The foot and mouth disease is well in hand, checked by the authorities in record time and with stock losses negligible in comparison with what might have been suffered had drastic regulations not been adopted.

Recent letters from friends in Denver and Chicago said that plans to spend the summer in Southern California had been held in abeyance, because of plague reports. Needless to say, the letters were at once answered with the facts, and these friends, their unfounded fears set at rest, will soon arrive.

Another vicious rumor about the Southland circulating back east is to the effect that we have a drought here, owing to light rains this winter. "Parties from Rockford, passing through Morrison yesterday afternoon in an auto from Los Angeles, Calif.," says an item in the Whitefield Sentinel of Morrison, Ill., "state that large numbers are leaving on account of the almost certain drought."

We must trace those rumors down and refute them. We who know that Southern California is neither plague-stricken or drought-stricken should be militant in stamping out such nonsense, which eastern papers are all too eager to print.

FRANKLIN STARTED SOMETHING

Today electricity is doing the work of 170,000,000 men. Generators, touched by the magic fingers of water or steam, whirl their coils through a myriad magnetic fields—and afar off, motors turn, lights flash, heat radiates and mills, factories, railroads, theatres and homes receive and transmute this mysterious energy into the practical, every-day uses of the world.

Little did Benjamin Franklin dream, flying that quaint kite with the key on the string and the end connected to a Leyden jar, that the spark he caught would energize the world. Even Thomas A. Edison could not have foreseen, when first he experimented with incandescent wire, that he would girdle the earth with radiance; nor could Morse, Bell and Marconi foresee, when they began their experiments, that they would loop it around and around with the telegraph, telephone and wireless.

Still in its infancy, though it has gripped modern civilization with the hand of a giant, what may not electricity yet do to aid man in his age-long struggle upward, through darkness to light! Along a dozen lines, any one of which may revolutionize the world and step forward human progress an aeon, scientists are quietly working, in the laboratories of the nations.

Any tomorrow may usher in a towering invention. We are living in an age of titans, when each year is more productive of progress than a hundred were a century ago. In war that may end the world or in peace that may save it, electricity is cast for a major role in the drama of the future.

MUST REST PERIODICALLY

Rest is not a cessation of work but rather a complete change of work No occupation can be followed continuously without a breakdown. Relaxation is essential. But doing nothing is not relaxation.

A lawyer, weary with the nerve strain of a difficult case, finds his mind continues to dwell on it if he sits down and does nothing. He must turn to some other pursuit to clear his head—golf or a book or a game of chess or checkers, whatever it may be.

A distinguished surgeon who performs operations requiring the most perfect control of muscles and nerves, finds his recreation in driving a motor car through the crowded city streets. A Washington newspaper correspondent, busied during the day with a hundred tasks, gets rest at night over a tense game of chess.

As in engineering, so in brain building and rebuilding, one stress or strain offsets another. We all must rest periodically, or the human machine goes to pieces like any other. But rest is not idleness. Hiking, horseback riding, motoring, the motion pictures, athletic contests, reading, games and sports are all forms of rest, which the wise man employs to keep himself fit and counteract the poisons of work.

The human body, like a good machine, is as strong as its weakest part. It cannot function properly or permanently as a unit, unless the nerve and brain cells are periodically refreshed with real, energizing, active rest.

THAT DOLLAR BILL OF YOURS

The average life of a dollar bill is less than a year, while a $10 bill may last four years, and a $10,000 bill—for painfully obvious reasons—never wears out. For this reason alone, it would be unwise to circulate much gold. Paper bills can be replaced by the government at a cost of about 1.3 cents each, whether they be of one denomination or another, but the loss by abrasion of gold in circulation is large.

At the present time, some $600,000,000 in gold is theoretically in circulation. Actually it is held in the vaults of banks, paper money being issued in its stead, as bank notes, through arrangement with the federal treasury.

What happens to the old bills? They move in a steady stream to the treasury department, where they are destroyed and new bills issued. More than $1,000,000 a day is replaced in this manner. Naturally great reserves of bills must be maintained. In one three-foot-square cabinet in the federal vault is $642,000,000 in paper money. A fortune of a billion dollars could easily be transported in an average trunk.

The world is learning that Southern California is ideal for all the year round residence. Time was when winter brought most of the tourists. Now they come every day, every month.

The hoof and mouth scourge is not California's greatest plague. The greatest plague are those who are sending forth sensational and exaggerated reports of the cattle disease.

People of Glendale will continue to be prosperous because they expect to prosper. That's prosperity psychology.

When in need of a stimulant, a cool bath beats a cold bottle.

KING CANUTE POINCAIRE FAILED TO STOP THE RISING TIDE

How Do We Know There Is a Soul?

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Thomas Edison has said:

"My brain is incapable of conceiving such a thing as a soul. I may be in error and man may have a soul, but I simply do not believe it. What a soul may be is beyond my understanding. I should not wish to be understood, however, as denying the existence of a soul. My position is that I have never been convinced."

Thomas Edison is one of the greatest men of this time. He is not only a great doer, he is a great thinker also. Therefore, whatever he says about any subject is worth attention. I wish, however, to point out what seems to me to be an error in his statement, as quoted above.

Mr. Edison uses the word "believe" loosely. What he means is that to his mind the balance of probabilities are not in favor of the existence of a soul.

Accurately speaking, belief means the acceptance of something that lies beyond the point of our knowledge. Strictly speaking, we believe only what, in the nature of the case, we cannot know. I believe there is a soul for the same reason that Mr. Edison believes there is such a thing as electricity. I do not know what a soul is and Mr. Edison does not know what electricity is.

He believes in electricity, its functions and powers and laws, for the simple reason that when he acts as if these things were so he gets certain invariable results.

I believe in the soul and in its functions, laws and reactions, for exatcly the same reason.

No kind of force can ever be known in the same way that we know that two and two are four. But you can measure it, use it, find out the way it acts and depend upon it. This is science. When you go to speculating about what the essential nature of a force may be you are not talking science; you are talking metaphysics.

My "belief" in the soul is not metaphysical; it is scientific.

That is, I assume that there is a soul, I take that as an hypothesis, then I observe how my theory works.

And, to my mind, it works better than any other theory in the explanation of human phenomena.

The hypothesis that man is merely an animal, as a horse or a dog, may explain many things; it accounts for hunger and pain and fear and sex desire and so on.

But the trouble with that theory is that it does not at all account for those phenomena which are most characteristic of man, which indeed occupy most of man's interest and attention. It does not account for poetry, patriotism, art, conscience, literature, nor any of that set of functionings which are the latest product of evolution.

Above all, any other theory than that of the soul fails to account for the most outstanding thing of all, which is Personality.

Of course no one knows what Personality exactly is; but, by the same token, Mr. Edison does not know what electricity exactly is.

I know there are souls because I deal with souls. I know some of the laws of souls, I know the powers and reactions of souls, and, altogether assuming that there are souls, I get certain dependable results.

And that is just exactly the way Mr. Edison knows there is electricity.

FIRE PREVENTION DUTY

From Miami, Okla., News-Record

Judgment will be passed on Miami next week when more than forty experts, with a predilection for fire hazards, canvass the city and designate dangerous conditions with red tags. This is not a move to secure fire insurance. Nor has it anything to do with a raise or a lowering of rates. It is a part of a country-wide plan, sponsored by Chambers of Commerce, to reduce the first risk to a minimum. Every week in the United States 300 people, the majority of them women and children, are burned to death. Millions on millions of dollars in property is destroyed.

Investigation has proven that upwards of 90 per cent of all fires are due either to carelessness or could have been prevented by simple preventative masures. Throughout the nation organizations similar to the Fire Prevention association are striving to reduce the danger of fire. Their first object is to save lives. Their second to save property. They are all insurance men, representing many different companies, but the business element is forgotten when they represent the association.

If someone should tell you that there was within the confines of this great country of ours a body of fanatics, believing in some demoniac god or other, and who every day offered fifty or sixty, perhaps more, human sacrifices to keep their god in good humor, you would be shocked beyond measure. The decent people of the nation would rise up and demand that the practice be stopped. Still, it is a fact that every week more than 300 people—mostly women and children—perish in fires in the United States. Most of them are due to carelessness. Over 15,000 lives sacrificed on the altars of the fire demon every year. While the rest of us continue on our careless way, not realizing that the next sacrifice may come from among ourselves.

These figures prove that proper precaution against fires is not only a civic duty, but may be the means of preventing individual suffering and loss.

DIFFERENT METHODS

(From San Francisco Journal)

As makers of public opinion, the political platform and the speech from a stump have shrunk in importance. Before the competition of the careful circular composed by the publicity man or the press agent the interview is fading away from the role of influencing political views. The megaphone and the radio broadcast the voice of the speaker, who may be at Washington, with his hearers at Havana, Honolulu or Sitka. The press remains the largest instrumentality for spreading the news and discussing political subjects. But new tools have appeared and others are appearing to shape or color public thinking upon public affairs.

One of the novel agencies consists of the movie film. The goodfellow clubs, too, have rapidly forged forward into influence as contributors to political opinions of voters.

The political organization seems to be going the way of the torchlight parade and the brass band, which as late as 1892 were worshiped as dynamos of ideas and partisan verve. The luncheon, however, of a boosters' or a goodfellows' organization has come into its estate of appreciation from the shrewder among the professional politicians. In such societies, largely because these are informal and clubby, the politician sees fat soil for sowing the seed of political propaganda. Talking as "the plain business man," the politician dilates on the indispensableness of a ship subsidy for the merchant marine of Oklahoma. The modern guilds of business men, coming together as advertising clubs, chambers of commerce, boards of trade, "Lions," Kiwanis or Rotarians, always are bundles of live wires. They readily lend themselves to use as cables for the electric currents of political suggestion.

PERILOUS LOGIC

(From Dallas Morning News)

A California decision in one of the lower tribunals has taken the position that a man on his two feet has as much right in law to travel the middle of the street as another man riding on four wheels. If a jay-walker may go where he will, then a motorist ought by the same logic to have the privilege of speeding down the sidewalk, providing he can find one wide enough for his purposes. But that kind of logic would get us nowhere, except to hospitals and morgues.

The People —of— Anytown

Character Sketches

There was no one in Anytown who had more friends than the Widow Lee. Her husband had been a Civil War veteran but from my earliest recollection she had been a widow. She lived on her small pension and an occasional fee for nursing. Trained nurses were unknown in Anytown then and no one hesitated to call upon Mrs. Lee when there was sickness in the family. Once in a while her services were engaged by those who could afford to pay a nurse, as when Mayor Caswell was down with an attack of pneumonia, but more often she responded to appeals for help out of a spirit of neighborliness.

The Widow Lee didn't know a thing about the science of nursing. I doubt if she ever used a clinical thermometer or knew the importance of a temperature record. She had never heard of dietetics though she was a good cook and seemed to know what to feed her patients. She was scrupulously clean yet I suppose she never knew what the word sterilization meant. She was not a nurse and made no pretensions to that title. She just helped out when there was sickness.

To describe the Widow Lee briefly, she was motherly. She was short and a little stout and her black hair was always smoothed back from her face and caught in a tight knot. I never saw her except in clean, stifflystarched blue calico with a white apron trimmed in hand-crocheted lace.

Knowing al the old-fashioned remedies, Mrs. Lee could render first aid before Dr. Elliott came—but she didn't know it was first aid. She could take a hot, wrinkled pillow and make it smooth and cool and restful with a touch; she could bring order and peace and hope into a home that was in chaos and despair as the result of sudden illness or an accident. Rarely was any provision made for the reception of the stork in Anytown. When the bird arrived it was customary to ask Mrs. Lee if she could come over for a little while. She always could and she took full charge not only as nurse but often housekeeper as well and she remained as long as she was needed.

Of course, some of the people Mrs. Lee cared for, died. But death was never a signal for her to leave the stricken home. She took complete charge of the house of mourning, managed everything, did the housework and comforted the family. Most of her patients lived and got well. I doubt if the average trained nurse today can show a better record.

I sometimes think that loving care as well as medical science is essential in nursing. They say that babies in institutions often die for want of mothering. It may be the same with sick people. At any rate, I feel sure the Widow Lee is wearing a crown of glory for no woman ever gave her life more completely to the suffering and sorrowing.

Worth While Verse

ROMANCE

I will make you brooches and toys for your delight
Of bird-song at morning and star-shine at night.
I will make a palace fit for you and me,
Of green days in forests and blue days at sea.

I will make my kitchen, and you shall keep your room,
Where white flows the river and bright blows the broom,
And you shall wash your linen and keep your body white
In rainfall at morning and dewfall at night.

And this shall be for music when no one else is near
The fine song for singing the rare song to hear!
That only I remember, that only you admire,
Of the broad road that stretches and the roadside fire.

The After House

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

Copyright, 1924, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

THE STORY

Dr. Ralph Leslie, just graduated from medical college, ships on the yacht Ella as deck steward. He is penniless and thinks this will be a good opportunity to recuperate from an attack of typhoid fever. Marshall Turner is the owner. His wife, her sister Elsa, a divorcee named Mrs. Johns, and a man named Vail are the passengers. There is a crew of fourteen, including the stewardess, a maid, the cook and Williams, the butler. Charlie Jones, a German sailor with a bent for religion, is friendly to Leslie. Captain Richardson and Turner have an argument over running the ship. Turner, drunk, appoints Singleton captain. Richardson knocks Singleton down. Mrs. Johns asks Leslie to sleep near the passengers' staterooms, in a pantry, as she is afraid of trouble. One night Schwartz, the second mate, disappears overboard, though nobody sees him jump. On the night of August 12 Leslie wakes in the pantry to find himself locked in. Vail, Captain Richardson and the Maid, Karen, are found murdered with an axe. The men put Leslie in charge, and they decide to head back to port. The axe is found where it was flung into the stewardess' berth. She says that Karen had been roused by a bell in the night, she thought Mrs. Turner's, but Mrs. Turner says she did not ring. Karen told the stewardess she thought Turner, who had annoyed her, was outside the door. She opened the door, screamed and fell dead. Mrs. Sloane said she saw a figure in white in the door throw the axe toward her. The crew imprisons Singleton. Leslie and Burns share responsibility for keeping discipline. They lock the axe in the captain's cabin and Leslie takes the key. They put the bodies in a lifeboat. Leslie sees Elsa pick up the pantry key in Turner's room. She tries to throw it into the sea, but Leslie sees her and she gives it to him. At night Adams, in the crow's-nest, says he has seen a white figure crawling along the deck. He hurls down a marlinespike, which disappears, but is found next day fastened over the side of the ship. Then one night Burns is knocked unconscious, the key is taken from his neck, the captain's cabin is opened and the axe disappears, with its sure evidence of finger-prints. The Ella docks at Philadelphia, where MacWhirter, Leslie's friend and classmate, meets him. Singleton is put on trial for murder. The different members of the crew and the passengers are questioned.

XXVIII—FREE AGAIN

With the submission of the case to the jury, the witnesses were given their freedom. McWhirter had taken a room for me for a day or two to give me time to look about; and his own leave of absence from his hospital being for ten days, we had some time together.

My situation was better than it had been in the summer. I had my strength again, although the long confinement had told on me. But my position was precarious enough. I had my pay from the Ella, and nothing esle. And McWhirter, with a monthly stipend from his hospital of $25 was not much better off.

My first evening of freedom we spent at the theatre. We bought the best seats in the house, and we dressed for the occasion—being in the position of having nothing to wear between shabby everyday wear and evening clothes.

"It is by way of celebration," Mac said, as he put a dab of shoe blacking over a hole in his sock; you having been restored to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That's the game, Leslie—the pursuit of happiness."

I was busy with a dress tie that I had washed and dried by pasting it on a mirror, an old trick of mine when funds ran low. I was trying to enter into Mac's festive humor, but I had not reacted yet from the horrors of the past few months.

"Happiness!" I said scornfully. "Do you call this happiness?"

He put up the blacking and, coming to me, stood eyeing me in the mirror as I arranged my necktie.

"Don't be bitter," he said. "Happiness was my word. The Good Man was good to you when he made you. That ought to be a source of satisfaction. And as for the girl—"

"What girl?"

"If she could only see you now. Why in thunder didn't you take those clothes on board? I wanted you to. Couldn't a captain wear a dress suit on special occasions?"

"Mac," I said gravely, "if you will think a moment, you will remember that the only special occasions on the Ella, after I took charge, were funerals. Have you sat through seven days of horrors without realizing that?"

Mac had once gone to Europe on a liner, and, having exhausted his funds, returned on a cattle boat.

"All the captains I ever knew," he said largely, "were a fussy lot—dressed to kill, and navigating the boat from the head of a dinner table. But I suppose you know. I was only regretting that she hadn't seen you the way you're looking now. That's all. I suppose I may regret, without hurting your feelings!"

He dropped all mention of Elsa after that, for a long time. But I saw him looking at me, at intervals, during the evening, and sighing. He was still regretting!

We enjoyed the theatre, after all, with the pent-up enthusiasm of long months of work and strain. We laughed at the puerile fun, encored the prettiest of the girls, and swaggered in the lobby between acts, with cigarettes. There we ran across the one man I knew in Philadelphia, and had supper after the play with three or four fellows who, on hearing my story, persisted in believing that I had sailed on the Ella as a lark or to follow a girl. My simple statement that I had done it out of necessity met with roars of laughter, and, finally, I let it go at that.

It was after 1 o'clock when we got back to the lodging house, being escorted there in a racing car by a riotous crowd that stood outside the door, as I fumbled for my key, and screeched in unison: "Leslie! Leslie! Leslie! Sic 'em!" before they drove away.

"Life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, Mac!" I said. "I've got the first two, and the other can be had—for the pursuit."

Mac did not reply; he was staring into the parlor. Elsa Lee was standing by a table, looking at me.

She was very nervous and tried to explain her presence in a breath—with the result that she broke down utterly and had to stop. Mac, his jovial face rather startled, was making for the stairs; but I sternly brought him back and presented him. Whereon, being utterly confounded, he made the tactful remark that he would have to go and put out the milk bottles; it was almost morning!

She had been waiting since 10 o'clock, she said. A taxicab, with her maid was at the door. They were going back to New York in the morning, and things were terribly wrong.

"Wrong? You need not mind Mr. McWhirter. He is as anxious as I am to be helpful."

"There are detectives watching Marshall; we saw one today at the hotel. If the jury disagrees—and the lawyers think they will—they will arrest him."

I thought it probable. There was nothing I could say. McWhirter made an effort to reassure her.

"It wouldn't be a hanging matter, anyhow," he said. "There's a lot against him, but hardly a jury in the country would hang a man for something he did, if he could prove he was delirious the next day." She paled at this dubious comfort, but it struck her sense of humor, too, for she threw me a fleeting smile.

"I was to ask you to do something," she said. "None of us can, for we are being watched. I was probably followed here. The Ella is still in the river, with only a watchman on board. We want you to go there tonight, if you can."

"To the Ella?"

She was feeling in her pocketbook, and now she held out to me an envelope addressed in a sprawling hand to Mr. Turner at his hotel.

"Am I to open it?"

"Please."

I unfolded a sheet of ruled note paper of the most ordinary variety. It had been opened and laid flat, and on it, in black ink, was a crude drawing of the deck of the Ella, as one would look down on it from aloft. Here and there were small crosses in red ink, and, overlying it all from bow to stern, a red axe. Around the border, not written, but printed in childish letters, were the words: "Not yet. Ha ha!" In a corner was a drawing of a gallows, or what passes in the everyday mind for a gallows, and in the opposite corner an open book.

"You see," she said, "it was mailed downtown late this afternoon. The hotel got it at 7 o'clock. Marshall wanted to get a detective, but I thought of you. I knew—you knew the boat, and then—you had said—"

"Anything in all the world that I can do to help you, I will do, I said, looking at her. And the thing that I could not keep out of my eyes made her drop hers.

"Sweet little document!" said McWhirter, looking over my shoulder. "Sent by some one with a nice disposition. What do the crosses mark?"

"The location of the bodies when found," I explained—"these three. This looks like the place where Burns lay unconscious. That one near the rail I don't know about, nor this by the mainmast."

"We thought they might mark places, clues, perhaps, that had been overlooked. The whole—the whole document is a taunt, isn't it? The scaffold and the axe, and 'not yet'; a piece of bravado!"

"Right you are," said McWhirter admiringly. "A little escape of glee from somebody who's laughing too soon. One-thirty—it will soon be the proper hour for something to happen on the Ella, won't it? If that was sent by some member of the crew—and it looks like it; they are loose today—the quicker we follow it up, the better, if there's anything to follow."

"We thought if you would go early in the morning, before any of them make an excuse to go back on board—"

"We will go right away; but, please don't build too much on this. It's a good possibility, that's all. Will the watchman let us on board?"

"We thought of that. Here is a note to him from Marshall, and—will you do us one more kindness?"

"I will."

"Then—if you should find anything, bring it to us; to the police, later, if you must, but to us first."

"When?"

"In the morning. We will not leave until we hear from you."

She held out her hand, first to McWhirter, then to me. I kept it a little longer than I should have, perhaps, and she did not take it away.

"It is such a comfort," she said, "to have you with us and not against us! For Marshall didn't do it, Leslie—I mean—it is hard for me to think of you as Dr. Leslie! He didn't do it. At first, we thought he might have, and he was delirious and could not reassure us. He swears he

OPENS NEW HOTEL FOR TRANSIENTS

J. Maxcy Pace Starts Modern Hostelry In Building on North Jackson

Another hotel catering to transient trade was opened at 135 North Jackson street, under the name of the St. James hotel. J. Maxcy Pace of 113 North Orange street, formerly a hotel owner of Laredo, Texas, is the owner and manager of the new hostelry.

Mr. Pace has been a resident of Glendale for about two years, coming here from Laredo, where he owned and operated several hotels. He has been conducting a real estate business in this city, although he still owns hotel property in Texas.

The hotel building was formerly the nurses' dormitory of the Glendale Sanitarium and Hospital. Mr. Pace purchased the property from that institution when it moved into the new buildings on East Wilson avenue, and has had it entirely remodeled and refurnished for a modern hotel. The structure is comparatively new, having been built only two years ago.

Modern Equipment

The St. James contains twenty-seven bedrooms, each one equipped with hot and cold water fixtures. Adjoining each chamber are two roomy closets provided with Yale locks. The owner has equipped the rooms with entirely new furniture, some with single and some with double beds. The entire building will be steam heated.

Mr. Pace states that every modern convenience will be placed at the disposal of his patrons. Newly equipped bath-rooms have been provided on both floors, conveniently located near the center of the building. A nicely furnished parlor and lobby have been fitted up to the left of the entrance.

Although the St. James has been established to fill a long-felt want in Glendale for a hotel to provide overnight accommodations to the traveling class, Mr. Pace announces that special rates will be made to patrons desiring to stay for longer periods.

Election Row Brings On Suit for Damages

LOS ANGELES, May 22.—As an aftermath of the primary election held two weeks ago, suit for $100,000 damages for alleged slander was filed by Claude D. Lawes, candidate for city office at Maywood, against W. C. Eyman.

The alleged offense was committed at a meeting of Maywood citizens at the Maywood school house, it is claimed. Lawes declares Eyman, in a speech, said that he was "not to be trusted, that he was an undesirable citizen, a blackguard, that he had only an ulterior motive in running for office and that was to bring shows and productions of a questionable character to town."

When he tried to answer the speaker, he and his "cohorts" silenced him with threats of arrest, Lawes alleges. He demands $50,000 actual, and $50,000 exemplary damages.

A sewing machine for use on leather shoes was patented on April 29, 1862.

Garden Fete Crowd Will Have Use of Big Swimming Pool

All the joys of the "Ole Swimmin' Hole" are to be found Saturday in the big pool at the L. C. Brand foothill estate, where the Tuesday Afternoon club women are to stage a garden fete.

Mrs. Alexander Mitchell is chairman of swimming and she states that all those attending the fete who would like to take a dip in the pool, should bring bathing suits and towels. Mrs. A. H. Montgomery, chairman of ways and means, under whose direction the big benefit is being given, states that "May 24 won't be Saturday, it will be Garden fete day!"

WOMEN FLOCKING TO CONVENTIONS

Five Important Meetings to Draw Many Delegates To Southland

By WILLIAM G. CAYCE
For International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, May 22.—During the last week of May and the first two weeks in June the eyes of the women of the world will be focused upon Los Angeles and vicinity, when five large meetings of women's organizations and one gigantic convention — the biennial of the General Federation of Women's clubs—that is expected to bring at least 8,000 delegates to the city, will be held.

On May 23 and 24 the California section of the Leage of Women Voters will hold its annual convention here. At this meeting the women expect to re-elect the present roster of officers—Miss Marion Delaney, of San Francisco, as president; Mrs. Mollie Bloom Flagg, of Lancaster, treasurer, and Mrs. Arthur S. Heinemann, of Los Angeles, as secretary.

Drama League Meets

The fourteenth annual convention of the Drama League of America and the first "Little Theatre Conference" will take place in Pasadena, starting May 27 and continuing until June 2.

Close on the heels of this convention come three others. The California Federation of Women's clubs is also to have a two-day session in Pasadena, starting May 30. This convention is usually the high light of the club year, but has been forced into the background this year because of the demands of the biennial.

The national convention of the Daughters of the British Empire is to take place May 29, 30 and 31 in Los Angeles.

University Women

Also on May 30 and 31 comes the annual state convention of the American Association of University Women.

Important as all these conventions are they are only the shadow cast before the big event —the biennial gathering of the General Federation of Women's clubs, which will meet here from June 2 to 14. Besides representatives from all over North America, delegates will come from several European countries.

Music was furnished by a school orchestra.

Dance On Lawn

A Maypole dance was the first number, a group of girls dressed in white, dancing gracefully around a Maypole, erected on the school lawn.

Then a troupe of girls in white dresses and carrying small flags in the freshman colors, green and white, appeared. Led by a graceful little miss, they gave an interesting demonstration of the work under Miss Shattuck.

Finally, another group of girls appeared, also dressed in white, with each one carrying two big pompons in the G. U. H. S. colors, black and red. As they went through the various exercises, in perfect rhythm with the music, the waving pompons were most effective, and the demonstration brought much applause.

Favor Establishment Of Air Fire Patrols

SACRAMENTO, May 22.—Re-establishment of the federal air patrol for fire prevention was unanimously favored at a meeting of the United Chambers of Commerce of the Sacramento valley, attended by State Forester M. B. Pratt.

Resolutions urging that this step be taken were forwarded to the secretary of war, secretary of agriculture and California representatives in Congress, on motion of President T. Harper, of Corning.

The patrol was suspended two years ago. Already in the forest sections of the northern counties fires have been unusually numerous owing to the absence of moisture.

Longer Life

DR. HARRY BENJAMIN, who is making claims of success for his rejuvenation treatments.

NEW YORK, May 22.—A little while ago Mrs. Gertrude Atherton, 67 years old, one of America's most noted authors, wrote a novel, "Black Oxen," in which the heroine, at 57, recovers the power to live the life of youth.

Today, a New York physician of repute, Dr. Harry Benjamin, is claiming success for his rejuvenation treatments. He made a report on the cases of seventy New York women, many of them prominent in society or the arts, whom he has treated, and described six cases at length.

This is his analysis of one of the cases:

"The patient was a teacher, aged 50. She complained of stiffness in the limbs, pain in the back, great exhaustion, weakened memory and great mental depression. On July 22, 1922, one X-ray treatment was given. A few days later she felt very well. The backache had disappeared, and she said that she could walk without any great discomfort—for the first time in several months. She had a distinct feeling of physical strength and energy.

"She was examined again on August 29, about six weeks after the treatment. Her so-called rheumatic pains had entirely disappeared; she had occasional palpitation of the heart; was decidedly less tired, in spite of being overworked, and looked unusually well. All her friends remarked on the favorable change in her appearance."

No complete restoration of beauty is promised by Dr. Benjamin, but rather a revival of mental and nervous vitality. Forty-five is considered the age at which women should attempt to regain their lost youth.

Dr. Benjamin is a glandular specialist, and in 20 per cent of his cases uses a serum from goats' glands. In the other 80 per cent, however, the X-ray treatment is used. The majority of patients are school teachers and nurses, who feel the need of renewed energy to carry on their work.

Big Sale of Timber Made by Government

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Awards covering the sale of approximately 310,000,000 feet of ripe timber on the Klamath Indian reservation in Oregon, were made at the department of the interior. The Shaw-Bertram Lumber company of Klamath, Ore., and the Klemen-Kennedy firm of Fortson, Wash., were the highest bidders.

The Klamath Indians will receive approximately $1,500,000 out of the sale.

Bay City Man Home; Tells Unusual Tale

SAN FRANCISCO, May 22.—Police are searching for the kidnappers of Rodolph Wanderly, 30, whose unexpected return to his home early this morning after an absence of nearly two weeks, ended one of the most unusual disappearances in local police annals.

Wanderly told a story of having been forcibly thrust into a large automobile on May 9, taken to an old home in an unfrequented part of the city and there drugged with opiates for several days.

Iron ore which possesses the property of attraction was called magnet by the Greeks because it was first found in Magnesia in Asia Minor, according to one account.

EXPLAIN METHOD TO GET REFUNDS

Sen. Shortridge Says Sum Due People of State Is $30,000,000 for 1918

With $30,000,000 at stake, the amount estimated due California income taxpayers for overpaid taxes in the year 1918 alone, Senator Shortridge has issued a statement urging married taxpayers of that year to protect his and her rights to future refunds by filing waivers against the statute of limitations with the collector of internal revenue before June 15. Applications will not be considered if waivers are not filed before this date. The statement continues:

"Waivers are not necessary for any overpaid taxes in any year except 1918. The statute of limitations has run against 1917 overpaid taxes, involving about $20,000,000, and there is a bill pending providing refunds for that year.

To Make Refunds

"For the years from 1919 down to the present time the bureau will make refunds of more than $100,000,000. Forms for this purpose are being mailed every married taxpayer in California.

"Until a few days ago the bureau of internal revenue would not accept California refund waivers for 1918 taxes. It was because of this ruling that I have introduced the bill extending the time for filing waivers for 1918 taxes. The purpose of this bill has been accomplished. The bureau has reversed its former position and has just announced that waivers for 1918 taxes will be accepted if filed on or before June 15."

NOTCHERS' PAPER ENLARGES STAFF

Pioneer News Increased In Size as Activity of Group Expands

The editorial staff of the Pioneer News, edited and published by a group of young boys, all members of the Pioneer Notchers' club of Glendale and vicinity, has been increased since the last edition. The staff now includes two editors, Philip Goss and Wiliam Goss; assistant editor, Walter Roberts; chief reporter, Harry W. Edwards. The various groups each have their own reporter who takes care of its publicity and all news items pertaining to their special group.

The last edition, published May 17, is the fifth issue and has increased considerably in volume. Announcement is made that, beginning with the next issue, The Pioneer News will publish the history of some great man. It is expected this feature will be of special interest to the Pioneer Notchers.

In last week's issue a detailed account was given of the plans for a Y. M. C. A. building in Glendale. This was of particular interest to the Pioneer Notchers, who will profit by the erection of such a building.

A subscription drive is being put on by The Pioneer News and it is expected all Pioneers will be subscribers before the close of the drive. Inasmuch as the News is published primarily with the thought of assisting in promoting the activities and ideals of the Pioneer Notcher club program in Glendale and surrounding territory, it is expected they will each do their share in putting this drive over in a big way. All subscriptions should be mailed to The Pioneer News at 514 East Harvard street.

MEMORIAL PARADE TO START ON DOT

Officials in Charge Fix the Hour as 2 o'Clock in Afternoon, May 30

It has been definitely decided that the Memorial Day parade will start promptly at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of May 30, according to E. E. McWain, secretary of the general committee in charge of arrangements.

Following the parade services will be held at Forest Lawn Memorial park.

The route of the parade has not been established as yet, and all organizations intending to participate are requested to notify Col. J. D. Fraser, officer of the day, as soon as possible, so that some idea may be had of the length of the procession.

Choose Speaker Later

The committee has not yet chosen the principal speaker of the day, but are looking for one of the best known orators in Southern California.

T. M. Barrett, past commander of N. P. Banks post, G. A. R., chairman of the committee, has asked R. E. Tucker, of Community Service, to arrange the program, and several local artists will sing.

Vaulted chambers have been dug on four different levels in the salt mines of Galicia, the galleries having a total length of 30 miles and on the lower levels are streets and houses in which live the miners who rarely come above ground.

That's All

Glendale Provides Bargains Character—What Is It? Make May Record Month Industry, Encouragement

By Gil A. Cowan

Are you taking advantage of the bargains to be had by trading in Glendale? Readers of The Glendale Evening News will note daily the many prices made by local merchants which not only compare, but, in most cases, cut under the offerings of outside stores.

Remember, every dollar spent in Glendale adds that much value to your own community. It makes the stores larger, the advertising patronage of this paper greater, the employment of more clerks possible, and so on. And every cent which goes out of the city has about one chance in 100 of returning. That is the truth, so trade at home.

From the Boston Globe we clip the following thought on "Character," which is well worth your reading:

"It would be well if every person as well as every firm were able to point to opportunities for gain turned down because—they 'sounded shady.' High tone is not obtainable through the lavish use of varnish, Turkish rugs and gilt letters on ground glass. The reputation to be envied is not created by expenditure, but by refusal to be interested in what does not quite measure up to standard. The man who is asked to do important things is, in the long run, the man who is known to draw the line with extreme strictness—as to what he will not do. There is a lot of temporary prosperity in get-rich-quick schemes and methods, but the more permanent success must be founded on something more than smartness. Its basis is best described as character."

Builders, get busy. Let's go. Make May a record month. Glendale needs more houses and business blocks if it is to be ready for the natural increase of population due to be brought here this fall and winter.

Everything is advantageous for the builder today. Better not procrastinate, but, if you have the finances, build. Yes, BUILD. Improved property increases values. That's what Glendale needs.

Industry—a necessity for every community—becomes a great need in a highly populous section like southern California.

This fact is recognized by the Greater Los Angeles association, as well as local Chambers of Commerce.

But, back of all industry there must be the production of raw materials, shipping facilities, cheap power, skilled labor and a well organized field for distribution.

First of all, the southland must encourage its ranchers in the production of those things which are needed. It must develop its harbors and co-operate with the rail lines. It must ask the federal government to build the Boulder canyon dam and harness the mighty Colorado river. It must bring in mechanics and others who are competent, and educate its youth to work in gainful industry. And last, but not least, it must force its trade extension into the Orient and the Latin-Americas and Australia with greater vigor than ever before.

There is no rest for the wheel of progress, and it takes many cogs to make the perfect working machine. Let us not linger in forging any of the many parts, but all work together in perfecting those things which will give employment to the millions of residents yet to come to this southland empire.

Old Mining Town to Be Shown on Screen

SACRAMENTO, May 22. — Shasta, ghost city of Shasta county, but in the early fifties the county seat and the largest town in Northern California, is to be filmed by the Warner Brothers company of Hollywood.

The town in which Joaquin Miller spent a term in jail prior to his trial on a charge of stealing horses and in which still stands the first Masonic lodge in California, erected by Peter Lassen, is thronged by screen beauties and film heroes depicting "Get Your Man."

The streets still are lined with solid two and three story brick buildings, with the formidable iron doors of half a century ago, but human inhabitants have practically disappeared.

"This ghost city is indeed a priceless find," said Director St. Clair of the Hollywood studio. "In Southern California, companies are spending thousands of dollars in creating deserted mining towns, but nothing gotten up for the occasion can equal the actuality of old Shasta."

Boy Chooses Death Rather Than School

SACRAMENTO, May 22.—Rather than attend school, Takeo Takamoto, 14-year-old Japanese school boy, committed suicide, according to the testimony of Deputy Sheriff M. V. Robbins, who said that the youth, just before he died of a bullet wound in the abdomen, told him that his father had ordered him to go to school.

The youth was found in a field with a rifle by his side and blood flowing from a severe wound. Medical aid was summoned, but death was inevitable. Takamoto's last words were that he secured the rifle and shot himself.

VIOLA DANA HAS THRILLING PART IN NEW PICTURE

Glendale Theatre's Patrons See Talented Actress In Her Best Role

Patrons of the Glendale Theatre were treated to an unusual and thrilling picture this afternoon, when Viola Dana's latest Metro production, "The Social Code," opened for a three-day run at this leading Glendale entertainment center. It is expected that throngs will be present at the 7 and 9 o'clock performances tonight.

All of Viola Dana's pictures are good but this is unreservedly her best. As "Babs Van Buren," a social butterfly with the heart of a real woman, she reaches emotional heights that leave the audience filled with admiration for this popular little star who is rising so fast to the heights of her profession.

Has Strong Cast

The story was adapted from "To Whom It May Concern," by Rita Weiman, and directed by Oscar Apfel, one of the screen's most careful and capable directors. In the supporting cast are to be found Malcolm McGregor, Edna Flugrath, Huntly Gordon, Cyril Chadwick, William Humphrey and John Sainpolis.

The story is of a reckless girl who courts disaster by her flirtations with men to whom women are mere playthings. Caught in the insidious toils of "The Social Code," she struggles deeper and deeper into the net—until a sudden great love brings her to her senses and there ensues as beautiful and charming a romance as has ever been filmed.

Music Is Feature

Manager William A. Howe of the Glendale Theatre is to be congratulated for bringing this picture to his screen and it can be predicted that not one person of this big showhouse who sees the picture whether tonight, Friday or Saturday, when it concludes, will be able to pronounce it anything but exceptional.

Second only to the pleasure of seeing a good picture in a good theatre is the joy of fine music—and Paul Carson at the wonderful organ of the Glendale Theatre is a combination that spells complete enjoyment. A special musical score has been arranged by Mr. Carson for "The Social Code" and assures perfect harmony for the varying tone of each scene.

Special attention is called by Manager William A. Howe to the large seating capacity of the Glendale Theatre. In the general admission section there are 1034 seats and an additional 216 in the loge section. In order to ensure absolute safety of every patron, numerous exits were incorporated in the construction of the building, which is in addition so built that fire is impossible, a fortune having been expended to make it one of the finest theatres in the entire Southwest.

Vaudeville Bill

Viola Dana in "The Social Code," which opened at the Glendale Theatre this afternoon with a 2:30 o'clock matinee, delighted hundreds. Tonight at 7 and again at 9 o'clock this charming picture will thrill large audiences. It will show Friday and Saturday as well, matinee and evening performances, with Bert Levey standard coast-to-coast vaudeville as an additional feature on the latter two nights—five fine acts, including dancing, novelty and singing numbers. The program tonight includes current news, Pathe review and a screaming Eddie Lyons comedy, "Welcome, Uncle."

Train to Advertise Charms of Glendale

They have until October 31 to return to Glendale, on their excursion tickets. A few will leave the train before it reaches Chicago, stated Mr. Rehwold.

Spread City's Fame

From now on, excursion trains will run east daily, throughout the summer. Every Glendalian who goes east is a valuable emissary, spreading the word of Glendale afar.

Among the Glendale organizations represented in the throng who saw off the travelers this morning were the City Council, Chamber of Commerce, Realty Board, Rotary, Kiwanis, Exchange and Optimist clubs, Retail Merchants' Credit association, Tuesday Afternoon club, patriotic and fraternal bodies.

WILL CONFER ON TRAFFIC REPORT

Council and Commission to Discuss Problems at Next Week's Meet

The report of the City Traffic advisory commission, recently filed with the City Council, will be taken up in committee of the whole next Tuesday morning and discussed on Thursday morning with the members of the commission, according to an agreement reached by the councilmen this morning.

The report, which was filed last week, makes several recommendations which do not conform with the present policy of the council, and these will be gone over in the committee room.

A communication from the Glendale Merchants' association approving the personnel of the traffic commission and any steps they may take to relieve the traffic situation in Glendale was read and filed.

Ask Annexation

A petition signed by Donald C. Barbee and five other property owners asking that the Mountain street district be annexed to Glendale was read and filed. This is the property between the L. C. Brand estate and the Burbank city limits.

Bids for the improvement of Bonita, El Rito, Del Valle, Capistrano, Hermosita, Don Carlos and Glorietta streets in the Verdugo Woodlands were opened and referred to the city engineer for checking and report.

W. S. Bear, 220 North Central avenue, headed a delegation of residents on that street asking that something be done toward installing the ornamental lighting system which has been hanging fire for some time. The city engineer and city attorney explained the situation to the representatives and promised action as soon as possible.

Plague Ordinance

The council adopted the ordinance regulating the care of animals during outbreaks of the foot and mouth disease.

The sum of $100 was voted, on the recommendation of the park board, to buy instruments for the municipal band.

The application of Barnum and Walters, Sparr Heights subdividers, for a permit to erect a special design of building near the Community House on Sparr Heights, was denied, on the recommendation of the planning commission.

A communication from the Fourth Street Improvement association asking that the council take up with the railroad commission the matter of a crossing over the Pacific Electric tracks on Justin avenue was referred to the ciyt attorney.

Praise President At Indiana Rally As True American

INDIANAPOLIS, May 22.—"President Coolidge is his own platform.

These declarations were made by Postmaster-General Harry S. New before the Indiana Republican State convention today.

ELECTRICAL LAW OF CITY SCORED IN COUNCIL MEET

Sam Davis Cites Instances Of Alleged Tampering With Wiring System

The electrical ordinance recently adopted by the City Council, requiring a $50 license fee and a $500 bond from firms doing electrical work in this city; together with local electrical contractors, came in for another arraignment at the hands of Councilman Sam Davis this morning, who told the council that he was in possession of startling facts which he could prove.

Councilman Davis bitterly opposed the adoption of the ordinance at the time it came up for consideration, claiming that it was protecting "a local combine," and that builders would eventually have to pay the license fee required through higher charges for electrical wiring.

Davis Cites Case

"I know of one case," stated Councilman Davis, "where bids were asked on electrical wiring. An outside firm bid $392 and a local firm $540. Naturally the outside firm got the contract. Another firm received the contract for the installation of the fixtures, and deliberately crossed the wiring that had been done by the outside firm.

"When the lights were turned on only two lights would burn. An attempt was made to put the blame on the firm that did the wiring. The architect, whose attention was called to the affair, was too smart for the fixture man, and locked the building. On investigation it was shown that the wiring had been tampered with when the fixtures were installed."

Kimlin's Testimony

"Where was our electrical inspector at the time?" asked Councilman Gilhuly.

"I don't want to say any more now," answered Councilman Davis, "but I want to bring this matter up in the committee of the whole."

Councilman Davis' contention that the builder would eventually have to pay the license fee and bond premium was partially substantiated by Councilman Kimlin.

"My brother-in-law was building a house some time ago," Kimlin stated, "and asked for estimates on the wiring cost. These were received. He was not able to go ahead with the work at the time. Lately he decided to finish the building. The electrical contractor spbmitted another estimate which was $5 higher than the original one, and when asked for his reason, stated that a change in the city ordinance had made it necessary."

Councilman Davis stated he had many facts to present to the council in committee of the whole bearing on the local situation.

GRADUATES COME TO ALUMNI MEET

Homecoming Plans Complete For Students' Reunion At High School

Arrangements are complete for the first Home Coming in the new Glendale Union High school tomorrow afternoon and night, when throngs of former students will crowd the new buildings on East Broadway to renew acquaintances and learn of the progress of the institution since their departure.

Graduates of ten and fifteen years ago are planning to again get in touch with each other at the social hours included in the afternoon and evening programs. Among prominent business men and women who are expected to be present tomorrow are: Dr. Fay Stone, Don Packer, Gi. Cowan, Corrine Orff, Dr. Lusby, Tom First, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Weller, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Stephenson, Owen Emery and many others.

Oldtimers Gather

Besides the many oldtimers in attendance, the more recent classes will be present in large numbers to help with the celebration. For many of them it will be the first reunion since the night of graduation. College students from all the institutions of the state will be represented in the gathering.

The plans have been brought to perfection by the members of the faculty who are graduates of the school, with Miss Iva Hunter as general chairman. The others are: Miss Dorothy Gilson, evening entertainment; Mrs. Carol Kolts, afternoon entertainment; Miss Jane Snyder and Miss Mildred Sawyer, invitations; Miss Frances Jackson, publicity.

Plan Social Hour

The program in the afternoon will start at 2 o'clock with an inspection of the buildings and visits to the class rooms. At 3 o'clock, the alumni will gather for a social hour and dancing in room 215. The senior basketball team will plan an alumni team between 4 and 5 o'clock. The girls' league will hold a party for the children of graduates at 2:30 o'clock.

The alumni will gather in the auditorium in the evening for a business meeting, at which time a permanent organization will be affected. A vaudeville program by former students will be put on immediately following the business meeting. The remainder of the night will be given over to a get-together meeting in room 215. Music will be provided for informal dancing.

CONGRESS READY TO ADJOURN SOON

as the ending of the long and bitter struggle over tax reduction. And by the terms of the agreement, every faction in Congress, Republican, Democratic and insurgent, can claim a victory. There are no losers.

The Republicans are pleased because they initiated the tax reduction bill. They were successful in enacting all of the Mellon administrative features, retaining the corporation tax at 12½ per cent, sidetracking the provision for publicity of tax returns and enacting the Longworth rates on estates, gifts and hundreds of miscellaneous taxes.

Even Insurgents Pleased

The Democrats are satisfied because they compelled the adoption of the Democratic normal and surtax rates on incomes, and can claim fifty per cent authorship of the bill. They succeeded, too, in placing a 12½ per cent limit on reductions for capital losses.

Even the insurgents are pleased. They were principally responsible for the defeat of the Mellon rates, particularly on big incomes, and they won a number of victories in the matter of corporation taxing.

Both Republican and Democratic leaders predicted today the passage of the completed tax reduction bill and its signature by President Coolidge within ten days.

Deficit Expected

"I expect the president to sign the bill," said Senator Smoot, Republican of Utah, chief of the Republican tax cohorts.

"I don't see how he can veto it," said Senator Simmons, Democrat of North Carolina, author of the new income rates.

Treasury experts today predicted the new tax bill will leave a deficit of $100,000,000 to $150,000,000 in the treasury next year. The surplus under existing laws now is estimated at $350,000,000. The new law reduces taxes $472,600,000.

The confidence that President Coolidge will sign the tax bill was shaken somewhat today when it became known that Secretary Mellon may recommend a veto.

Mellon Objects

The compromise bill, it was announced at the treasury, is "very unsatisfactory" to Secretary Mellon. He regards it as "unscientific" and utterly destructive of the carefully arranged program he prepared six months ago.

Whether, however, the president would care to risk further friction with Congress by vetoing the bill—with the almost certainty that it would be passed over his veto—was regarded as extremely problematical.

DEFINES VARIANT PACIFIST TYPES

Christian Science Monitor's Plan to Conscript All Wealth Is Praised

Editor The Glendale Evening News:—Pacifists seem to divide in two widely variant types. In one category are those who might well be termed "individualists," while in the other class are aligned people whose method would make appropriate their designation as "nationalists." The fundamental difference seems to lie in this: The individualist is not fully aware of the signs of the times; he thinks that humanity's disposition to temporize with war is due to inherent combative and destructive instincts, to a love of war and a conviction that war is a necessary and proper method of settling international differences. The individualist's plans to end war are too often vague and incoherent. When he infrequently offers a remedy, he is inclined to voice it thus: "Let all men be as I am, realizing that war is wicked, and there will be no more war."

The nationalist is a practical sort of person. He perceives that humanity's eyes have lately been opened to the evil and folly of war. He sees that the problem is to uncover and counteract those subtle influences whether of militarism, greed of gain, lust for power, propaganda or what-not—projecting nations into wars against their wish and desire, but in the reluctant conviction that trial by battle offers the only solution.

Futile Oratory

In war time, if exempt from military service, the individualist is prone to indulge in ex-post-facto soap box oratory which is futile if not actually treasonable. If inducted into uniform he is inclined to make himself conspicuous by objections (conscientious and otherwise) or to indulge in varied manifestations which serve only to accentuate his own personality, lower the morale of his fellow soldiers and "gum up the work" generally.

Turning to the nationalist, whatever his religious convictions, we find his conduct to be in harmony with the Christian injunction to "render unto Caesar." In war he is seen soberly serving flag and country, amenable to discipline and fulfilling to the utmost his duty as citizen or soldier. If a combatant, he acquires a familiarity with the so-called horrors of war that breeds in him a genuine contempt and a disposition to regard war as a problem to be solved rather than a terror to be preached about. This type of mind welcomes the peace plan of the Christian Science Monitor as a manifestation of thought in line with the highest American national ideals.

Small Forces Used

From the dawn of history down to comparatively recent times, foreign wars were carried on by tiny armies, made up largely of professional soldiers. In proportion to the bulk of able-bodied male population, these armies were relatively small—much smaller relatively than the legions engaged in the World War. Ancient Rome, for example, maintained armies in the foreign field for several centuries while at home business went on as usual. Due to this policy, foreign wars left a large percentage of the eligible male population unaffected in spite of the fact that conscription of soldiers and impressment of seamen were practised during all these years. Accordingly, in every nation there grew up a class of men, who, although they strongly favored war in the abstract, were quite content that someone else should do the fighting. Their watchword might be paraphrased as "Let George do it."

To this smug thought, loudly acclaiming our own entry into the World War, the wisely borrowed conscription plan that followed came as a rude and poignant shock. The still small voices of anti-militarist protest heard during the Spanish and Philippine campaigns were as nothing to the wails of objection arising in 1917 from those eligible American youths and their near relatives whose approval of our commitment to the war had been vociferous—but highly impersonal. And a much larger body of citizens whose previous attitude towards war had been more neutral, although with keener sense of personal obligation to country, were awakened by the selective draft to active thinking upon the question of morality and necessity for war.

Potent Force

By now it has become apparent that the wholesale conscription of masculinity in the late war and the prospect that its sons will bear the burden of man-power in future wars has been one potent force in committing the proletariat of all civilized countries to definite steps for world-peace. Nothing operates to lift unnecessary and galling national burdens any more effectively than the equal distribution of those burdens upon the shoulders of all. Our national mental reaction to the results of the selective draft has already led observant critics to take it for granted that in any future war, conscription of combatants would be augmented by conscription of labor. Conscription of capital, advocated by the Christian Science Monitor, would round out and balance the scheme for equal distribution of the burden.

Resources in Reserve

Such an impressment of capital would entail many problems and would call for a much higher degree of administrative skill than was required to manage the selective draft during the late war. Yet there is reason to believe that America has the resources to meet this emergency, should it arise.

Great political ills are not always healed instantaneously. It is usually necessary for man to attain his progress step by step. The Christian Science Monitor does not put forth its plan to equalize war's burden with the guarantee that it will end war forthwith. It is offered as a human step in the right direction. To see a sectarian daily newspaper which so uncompromisingly denies war and its reality in the abstract, appear as sponsor for an exceptionally workable and simple plan to handle the concrete evil boldly, speaks well for the practical trend of modern religious thought.

That the support Glendale gave Calvin Coolidge in the recent primary has not gone unnoticed by the president, is voiced in a telegram from John Robert White to Mrs. White at their home, 347 North Orange street.

Mr. White, who has been in New York and other eastern cities, wired yesterday from Washington, D. C., "Had interview with president today. Informed him of the vote cast in Glendale at primary. The president expressed great appreciation of the confidence displayed in him by the vote of Glendale."

Mr. White left Washington last night. He will arrive home late in May.

Guards Patrol Range To Protect Aqueduct

LOS ANGELES, May 22.—With 100 feet of the flume wall shattered in the vicinity of Lone Pine by a dynamite blast early Wednesday morning the authorities of Los Angeles are taking every possible precaution to prevent further depredations to the city's water supply, which travels 150 miles over the mountains from the Owens' river valley.

Armed guards last night patrolled the lonely range, both on foot and on horseback, fearing that the parties who fled in a high powered motor car after their futile attempt to wreck the life-giving steam would again try to carry out the nefarious scheme which has as its background one of the most subtle fights ever engaged in by a municipality and power corporations on one hand and the people of farming area on the other.

Inflammatory articles recently appearing in a San Francisco paper, charging that Los Angeles by its water grabbing policy had laid a fertile valley liable to barrenness is given as one possible reason for the dynamite plot.

Plans Pleasure Trip To Points In East

An extended eastern trip to Montreal and points in New York will be made this summer by D. W. McQueen of 140 South Jackson street. They will return to Glendale by way of San Francisco.

CHURCH MEMBERS TO HONOR PASTOR

Plan Reception for Rev. and Mrs. Winnard, Back From Six Weeks' Trip

Rev. James F. Winnard, pastor of Tropico Presbyterian church, and Mrs. Winnard, who have just returned from a six weeks' vacation trip, are to be honored tomorrow night by the members of the church and Sunday school at a reception to be held in the church parlors.

Every organization and department connected with the church has been requested to take some part in the entertainment. A musical program and other special features will be presented. All members and friends of the church and Sunday school are invited to attend.

Rev. and Mrs. Winnard spent several days in Panama, three days in Cuba and Havana, one day in Key West, three days in Miami, St. Augustine and Jacksonville, Fla. They also visited New Orleans, Grand Canyon and the petrified forests in Arizona.

The most enjoyable part of their trip, they state, was the visit to their former home in Tampa, Fla., where they had lived for fifteen years. Here they visited with relatives and old friends for two weeks, when several social events were given in their honor. Although their trip proved most enjoyable, they are glad to get back to Glendale again, they state.

FATE OF RELIEF BILL UNCERTAIN

Agricultural Legislation May Fall Through at Present Session

By A. O. HAYWARD
For International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—The fate of the McNary-Haugen bill, setting up a $200,000,000 government export corporation, to sell agricultural products abroad and stabilize prices, is considered uncertain, and if it fails of passage there is scant likelihood of farm relief legislation of any kind by the present Congress.

Opposition to the measure is consolidating rapidly. Only a fear that its defeat will eliminate all chances of farmer relief before June 7, the hoped for date of adjournment of the session, is holding many congressmen to its support.

Another Substitute

Congressman Rainey, Democrat of Illinois, brought forth a substitute bill yesterday which offers only aid to the wheat farmers, flour millers and packers of pork products.

Debate on the farmer-relief legislation will be resumed today and continued until Saturday, when it is hoped a final vote on the bill will be possible. Many amendments to the bill are being prepared, farm bloc leaders are campaigning among city congressmen for support.

Mexico Good Market, According to Buyer

BAKERSFIELD, May 22.—Vincent Mistretta of Mexico City, who recently purchased many carloads of cherries in the Sacramento valley for shipment to Mexico, is buying large quantities of fresh vegetables, fruits and canned goods for shipment to the neighboring republic during the season.

The foreign buyer said that Mexico excelled in tropical products but the vegetables and fruits of the temperate and semi-tropical zones did not grow well below the border. Especially strong is the demand for celery, he declared. Celery will grow in his native land but the quality is so poor that it is refused by the better class of trade, he said.

Aged Man Steals to Keep from Starving

SANTA BARBARA, May 22.—Because he was starving, he admitted, J. J. Pico, formerly one of the most influential residents of Santa Barbara county, killed a steer that did not belong to him and provided himself with food.

The aged man was released on probation recently by the Santa Barbara county court because of the mitigating circumstances which called for mercy from the judge.

Pico's arrest was brought about by the finding of the steer's ears, it was revealed when he pleaded guilty to cattle rustling in the superior court. He had removed all other evidence of his theft. He lives in a shack far up Refugio Pass, miles from any other habitation.

Three New Outbreaks Of Disease Reported

SACRAMENTO, May 22.—New infections in Madera, Los Angeles and Tuolumne counties, and three new cases in Merced county, were reported to Dr. U. G. Houck, chief of the federal forces engaged in eradicating the foot and mouth disease. About 700 cattle and 150 hogs were ordered slaughtered as a result of the new outbreaks.

A telegraph message completely circled the globe and was heard by the sender 80 seconds after he had sent it.

Why I Am In Glendale

After visiting many of the principal cities in the United States and also the neighboring towns, I bought a home in Glendale last January. Situated at the apex of the San Fernando valley on gently rising ground from river to mountain ensures it good drainage, air and water. Its well paved streets, well lighted and lined with detached homes; abundance of flowers, fruits and vegetables; fine stores with up to date merchandise at reasonable prices; convenient means of transportation by electrics and busses to Los Angeles and places of interest; its efficient newspapers, schools, banks, hospitals, theatres and churches; the absence of sordid haunts; good public service and loyal citizens, together with the delightful climate, and lately, plenty of rain, have led me to feel that I have found "the land of my dreams" and "the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow" in the fairyland of Glendale.

WONDERS OF STATE SEEN ON JOURNEY

WIDE STREET IS AID TO BUSINESS

Closing of East Colorado for Paving Proved Car Big Trade Factor

The question of whether or not a wide boulevard is conducive to business has been definitely answered in the recent closing of East Colorado street, according to J. M. Boland, president of the East Colorado Improvement association, who declares emphatically that the answer is:

"Yes, a wide boulevard IS conducive to business."

Mr. Boland declares this is a demonstrable fact, which his association has proved to its entire satisfaction, after a thorough canvass of merchants in the affected territory.

Business Decline

"The closing of East Colorado street, during widening and paving operations, has caused merchants in the district to suffer a falling off of from 20 to over 90 per cent," he says. "The automobile is an all-powerful factor in modern trade. Without the motoring public, the average merchant cannot survive—and we have proved it.

"Investigation disclosed that grocery stores of the district have suffered a 33 1-3 per cent falling off, butcher shops 50 per cent, florists over 90 per cent and even bakers at least 20 per cent.

Look to Future

"Our petition is before the City Council today for an additional 10 feet on either side of the present 80-foot roadway on East Colorado street, making a 100 foot boulevard. We plan to start soon on West Colorado street, west of Central avenue, so that the entire boulevard, from east to west city limits, may be a uniform 100 feet in width, with the exception of the strip in the heart of the business district, from Glendale avenue to Central avenue, which must be

WANT SIGNS POSTED IN TOWNS

Auto Club Points Out Big Advantages of Having Places Known

"Tell 'em where they are" is suggested to the smaller towns of this section by the Automobile Club of Southern California. This snappy phrase is directed to the communities that will be visited by tens of thousands of automobiles during the coming summer. In many of these municipalities there is not a sign of any kind to indicate the name of the place or what it represents.

It is pointed out by the touring department of the automobile club that this season will bring an unusually large number of home seekers to Southern California. They will come in automobiles and visit many towns before deciding on a place to locate.

Coming to Locate

It is up to these places to take advantage of this golden opportunity to increase their population by making the community attractive to visitors and supplying information about it.

Never in history have so many persons planned to come to California to live. Just what spot they will select for their homes is up to the communities themselves, as each has some distinct offering. It is obvious that the towns and districts presenting the greatest appeal will attract the largest number of these motoring home seekers.

Let the travelers know where they are and tell them the features of the place they are in, is the suggestion of the automobile club, which has done its part by thoroughly signposting every mile of highway in Southern California.

Auto Industry Uses Much Lumber in Year

About 8,000,000,000 board feet of lumber will be used this year by the automobile industry of the United States, according to latest estimates. More than 1,000,000,000 board feet of lumber was used by the industry, in automobile body construction alone, in 1923. The frames of most automobile bodies are built of maple, birch, white ash, elm, oak, beech, gum, birdseye, chestnut, and sycamore. Large quantities of lumber are used in shipping, crating and blocking automobiles and trucks and for crating automobile parts and accessories.

USE OLDSMOBILE COUPE AS TRAVELOGUE CAR ON TRIP TO SCENIC SPOTS

Day's Pleasure Jaunt of 166 Miles Reveals Lake, Desert, Mountains, Valley, Canyon Beauties to C. H. Hunter and Party

By A. S. HALL
Of The Evening News Staff.

California, it has long been known, has many varieties of country and climate. This fact makes it such a valuable state for the movie companies, for they can find "locations" of all kinds and descriptions within the borders of the state. It also serves to provide an endless amount of constantly changing scenery.

It was for this reason that The Evening News Travelogue party made the journey for the week over a route that offered practically everything the state has in the way of scenery and climate. The trip can easily be made in a day and is a little out of the ordinary in motor travel, inasmuch as it embraces ocean, lake, mountain, valley, canyon and desert country.

Use Oldsmobile Coupe

The travelogue car this week was an Oldsmobile coupe, supplied by C. H. Hunter, local representative, of 208-10 West Broadway. Members of the party, in addition to Mr. Hunter, were Mrs. Hunter, Carl Cramer, connected with the Oldsmobile agency, and Mrs. Cramer.

"I have taken a good many trips around California," Mr. Hunter said, "and I have seen a lot of scenery, but I can't recall when I have seen so many types and kinds of scenery in one day as we viewed on the trip that took us to Palmdale, Elizabeth lake, over the Ridge route and back home.

"Realizing that we would encounter not only a variety of scenery, but various sorts of climate, we made the trip in an Oldsmobile coupe, and we had comfort and convenience every foot of the way. If the sands of the desert were shifting as we crossed, all we had to do was pull up the windows. When it got too warm, we lowered them and got plenty of air. The closed car protected us from dust and drafts, two of the biggest drawbacks on any motor trip. We didn't run into any rain, but we would have been prepared for it if the skies had opened up."

Find Beautiful Oaks

The first leg of the route is over the San Fernando valley road to the city of that name. This road is so well known, as well as the old mission near the thriving city, that further description is unnecessary. Next comes Newhall, after passing through the Newhall tunnel, and then on to Saugus, where the valley road ends.

One of the points of interest is the large sign at the junction of the valley road and the ridge route, which shows the routes to follow for eastern and northern points.

Turning to the right, the travelogue party continued gliding over the hard roads to Oak's Garage, 14 miles from Saugus. This is one or the most picturesque spots of the entire trip, Mr. Hunter said, as it is here that numerous liveoaks are found. It is a wonderful place to stop for a picnic, for there is plenty of shade and water.

Through Mint Canyon

The grade up to Oak's Garage is an easy grade, but after passing Oak's Garage and getting more into Mint Canyon the grade becomes a little stiffer. The pull can be made up to the top of the canyon with little effort, Mr. Hunter said, and added that the Oldsmobile coupe walked right along without any trouble.

Scenery such as is seldom seen in California is to be found in Mint Canyon, with its rugged walls giving way to sloping green sides, to be replaced a few moments later by more rocks and fantastical formations.

Wild flowers abound on the slopes of the canyons, forming a beautiful background for the waving trees and jagged, projecting rocks. Nature's colors seem to blend in a carpet more wonderful than the most vivid from the looms of Persia.

BIG SUM TO BE SPENT ON CARS

Estimate Expenditures for Year Three Times Cost to Run Government

Automobile owners will spend three times as much this year as it cost to run the biggest business in the world, according to statistical data received by the Automobile Club of Southern California.

The "biggest business" referred to is the United States government, which will cost around four billion dollars in 1924. It is estimated that this year will see an expenditure of at least twelve billion dollars on cars, trucks and their maintenance.

One Generation Old

These stupendous figures give some idea of the extent of the motor vehicle industry, which is only one generation old. It is not surprising that speculation on the future reaches staggering totals when the present annual expenditure is considered.

Last year the public spent nearly three billion dollars on new cars. In addition to this there were 2,400,000 cars sold, valued at one billion dollars.

According to estimates for the present year, the country will consume approximately nine billion gallons of gasoline at a cost of

ENDEAVOR TO CUT DEATH LISTS

Commission to Study Causes of Accidents, Devise Plans to Reduce

By ROBERT S. THORNBURG
For International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Secretary of Commerce Hoover has played a hand in an endeavor to reduce the tremendous loss of life from automobile accidents in the United States every year.

Directed by Hoover, a dozen national organizations have started the formation of a permanent committee that will study the causes of motor accidents, responsible for at least 17,000 deaths in 1923, with a view to making the city streets and rural highways safe for humanity.

Among the organizations cooperating with the Department of Commerce are the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, the National Safety Council, Equitable Life Insurance Company, American Automobile Association, National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, National Bureau of Casualty Surety Underwriters, American Federated Engineering Society, American Railway Association and the American Mutual Alliance.

will submit names of persons to represent it on the permanent commission. It was expected that Hoover would act as chairman and the Department of Commerce as a co-ordinating body.

Some of the objectives of Hoover's committee are:

Elimination of careless drivers.

Adequate punishment of reckless and intoxicated operators.

Investigation and determination of cause of automobile accidents.

A national campaign of education against auto accidents.

Standard Laws

Included in the tentative plans of the organization is standardization of traffic regulations throughout the United States, already suggested by experts at the bureau of standards. Traffic regulations differ widely, and their lack of uniformity may to some measure be responsible for accidents.

Following organization of the committee it will immediately proceed to compilation of data already collected by the automobile industry and associations as to the causes of accidents. A thorough study of these causes by experts will form the basis for recommendations as to their elimination, and for an educational campaign.

The possibility of asking President Coolidge to summon governors and other state officials to ask for their co-operation in the drive against automobile deaths has been suggested by members of the committee representing the American Automobile Chamber of Commerce, it was learned.

one billion, eight hundred million dollars.

Gas, Oil and Tires

Stopping for a quart of oil occasionally to help out the old bus along the highway costs one hundred eight million dollars, and a little grease now and then aggregates seventy-five million dollars. The new tire bill will reach eight hundred million dollars, and an equal amount will be spent for accessories.

The annual expenditure in the United States for motor vehicles is nearly thirty-three million dollars a day, or about 30 cents a day for every man, woman and child in the United States. Curiously enough, this is the exact amount that the American people are credited with adding to their savings accounts.

Flexible Laws to Regulate Hunting, Fishing Are Urged

SACRAMENTO, May 15.—Advocacy of flexible laws to regulate hunting and fishing on the theory that game birds and wild animals have cycles of abundance and scarcity, is made in a bulletin issued today by the State Fish and Game Commission.

"Within California," says the commission, "almost everyone has seen periods of abundance and scarcity in rabbits. Many also have noticed fluctuation in the numbers of quail. Just at present there is a notable scarcity of tree squirrels owing to the ravages of disease. Should deer be reduced in some portions of the state, as they are in Modoc county, it might take two years before a change could be made in the laws regulating the killing of deer.

"Under such circumstances, we can not expect to properly administer our game resources if we fail to have flexible laws."

Will Pilot Studebaker

EARL COOPER, veteran race driver, is limbering up the Blue Special and giving the rail birds something to talk about as he whizzes around the Indianapolis track.

"Earl Cooper, in his new Studebaker special, is giving the railbirds at the Indianapolis speedway a thrill these days in the early speed trials for the annual international 500-mile race, May 30," says Don Packer, of Packer Auto Co., 245 South Brand boulevard, local Studebaker dealers.

"Cracking off five laps at an average speed of 100.3 miles an hour in his first tryout, Cooper demonstrated what a clean pair of heels the little Studebaker special has, when Mayor Lew Shank headed a delegation welcoming the veteran driver.

"This was the first time, in recent years, that Indianapolis has given a municipal reception to an arriving speedway contestant. The occasion was in honor of Studebaker.

"For it is the first time the Studebaker corporation's house flag will flutter from the track pits, when the thirty-one speed busses scuttle across the line at 10 o'clock on the morning of the great annual gasoline derby.

"The car is painted robin egg blue. It bears in gold the numeral '1,' because Cooper was the first entry signed up for the 1924 speedway classic."

concrete road which continued on to Lancaster and Mojave, and on to Bakersfield. Turning to the left at Palmdale, the dirt road to Elizabeth lake and Lebec is encountered.

The road is in fair shape but travel is not as pleasant as along other parts of the tour on account of the dust. However, the members of the travelogue party were safe from dust and hot winds in their coupe.

Elizabeth lake, the "little Yosemite" of California, is a favorite spot for duck hunters in season, and during the summer months plenty of fishermen can be found at the lake in season. There are numerous cottages and cabins available for camping parties, while excellent meals can be secured at the inns.

At Famous Lodge

Leaving Elizabeth lake, the party continued over the dirt route to what is known as Chandler's station, where the Ridge route is encountered. Turning to the right, the party continued north on the Ridge route to Lebec, where a visit was made to the famous Lebec lodge, noted far and wide for the unsurpassed meals to be obtained there. From Lebec one can travel over a concrete road into Bakersfield.

Coming back over the Ridge route, Sandberg's, another small place, was passed. Here is located an inn where an excellent meal can be secured; there is a service station nearby, and a place to stop and rest.

Driving over the Ridge route from Sandberg's to Castaic, 20 miles, it is best to keep the speed of the car down to 15 or 18 miles an hour, Mr. Hunter said. This portion of the road, which is winding and full of curves, is constantly patrolled, and persons going too fast run afoul of the law.

Back to Saugus

From Castaic the route continues to Saugus, where the travelogue party struck the San Fernando valley and its heavy amount of traffic in the late afternoon. At Castaic the northern coast route starts, going to Ventura, Santa Barbara and northern points. From Saugus the route back to Glendale is the same as the first leg of the journey.

In the event one does not care to drive the entire route outlined here, which is 166 miles, there is a dirt road down Bouquet Canyon which leaves the dirt road about half way between Palmdale and Elizabeth lake and strikes the concrete road up through Mint Canyon a little ways north of Saugus.

One of the items that every motorist should check on before taking any trip in California now is whether or not the route he proposes to travel is free from all quarantine bans. This preliminary examination will save the motorist considerable trouble and disappointment, as well as needless miles of travel if he should fail to check up before starting out.

WOMAN SUCCEEDS ON SALES FORCE

Miss Lucille Wulff Proves Asset to Maxwell and Chrysler Dealer

The possibility of a woman's making a success as a seller of automobiles has been converted into a certainty by the work that is being accomplished by Miss Lucille Wulff, who has joined the sales force of the Glendale Motor Car Company, 124 West Colorado street, Maxwell and Chrysler dealers.

Miss Wulff, who has had years of experience in the automobile business in various branches, convinced Lyman P. Clark, president of the company, that she could "deliver the goods," and she has been living up to her claims in every respect, Mr. Clark declares.

"She is a careful driver, knows the mechanism of a car from every angle, and since she joined our staff Miss Wulff has proven of invaluable service in teaching women how to handle their Maxwell cars. Her keen insight into the feminine psychology, her knowledge of the problems that every woman driver is called on to face and to overcome if she is to handle a car with ease and safety, render her particularly useful in our transactions with women automobile owners and prospects, and, as a 'salesman,' Miss Wulff is making good just as successfully as any man I have ever known."

Miss Wulff says that she realized some time ago that there was a wide field open to the woman who could not only sell cars but who would bring to the problems connected with her work a sympathy with other women that is sometimes lacking in the make-up of even the best intentioned salesman. In the short time Miss Wulff has been with the Glendale Motor Car Co., she has made many calls on the women who own Maxwell cars in this territory and has arranged to render the needed service on their cars, while others leap at the chance of taking driving lessons from a woman who knows just how to impart the required knowledge, starting at the very beginning and working gradually through every step until the new owner or student can handle her car with ease and complete confidence.

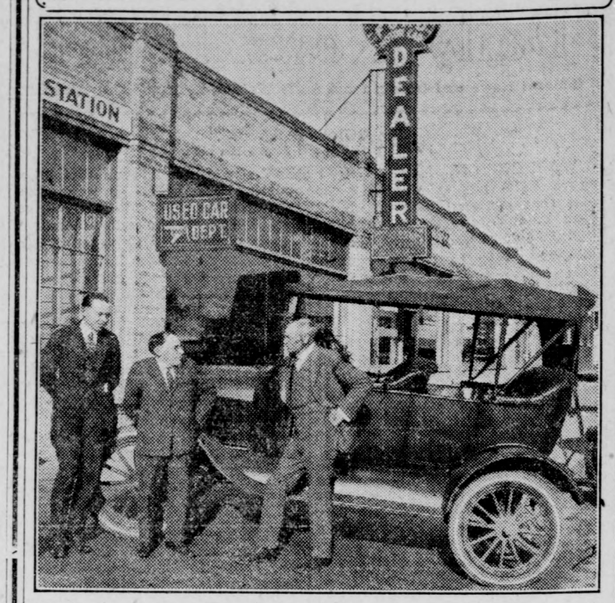
Old Ford Going Strong

SAUL FRANK (right) drove the 1909 Ford out from Kalamazoo to Glendale in 1910, sold it to W. A. GOSS (middle) who still runs around in the veteran machine. JESSE E. SMITH on the left.



Running on the streets of Glendale at the present time is a Ford car that has been driven 100,000 miles and is still going strong. Built 'way back in the year 1909, when a car was still in the novelty class, this ancient Ford has traveled from Kalamazoo, Mich., to California, and has covered most of the Golden State since arriving here in 1910.

Saul Frank, now living at 214 North Central avenue, left Kalamazoo nearly fifteen years ago in his "latest model" Ford, and became one of the pioneer transcontinental motorists. The folks in the old home town were so enthusiastic in their send-off that it was necessary to call the police to hold the crowds back, according to reports in a Kalamazoo paper.

The Kalamazoo people were a little doubtful of the Ford's ability to accomplish what was then a risky undertaking for any car, but the Franks arrived safely in Glendale after some hard and tiresome driving.

In those days such things as transcontinental highways were unheard of and when it rained the roads were as likely as not to turn into rivers. Frank admits that he ran up against some bad weather and had to ship his car through part of the way.

When the Franks arrived in Glendale they counted the number of cars in this city and found that with their arrival the number was increased to twelve.

"In those days it wasn't quite so hard to find a place to park when you went downtown to buy something for dinner," Mrs. Frank said, laughingly.

When the ancient "Henry" was taken into the Jesse Smith Ford agency, 115 West Colorado boulevard, a short time ago for repairs, the mechanic thought the car had been stolen because the "engine number had been tampered with." On closer inspection it was found that the number was merely so low, when compared to the numbers found on the engines turned out today, that the repair man thought it had been reduced.

William A. Goss, of the Glendale branch of the Security Trust & Savings bank, is the present owner of the car and he says that it is still good for a lot of service. He has taken trips to Santa Cruz and San Diego in it, and always reaches his destination without trouble. The old roadster, fixed up with a touring body, does not show the long years of service behind it, and runs on without a complaint.

Flow of Water In Sacramento River Drying Up, Report

SACRAMENTO, May 15.—Water in the Sacramento river will be lower this year than ever before, according to Edward Hyatt, Jr., acting chief of the State Department of Water Rights, who has just returned from a trip to Modoc and Lassen counties.

The big river today is as low as has ever been recorded, said Hyatt, and springs in the pit river drainage basin which are the main source of the Sacramento river are drying up, which never before have been known to cease flowing. The volume of water in the river today is estimated at 3320 cubic feet per second at Red Bluff, while in May, 1920, the year most frequently compared with the present for lack of rainfall, the indicator showed at Red Bluff 6400 cubic feet per second.

Hyatt advises irrigatiors throughout the state to make as much use of the water as possible early in the season before the full effects of the shortage are apparent.

AUTO INCREASES LIFE'S PLEASURE

Family of Moderate Means Purchases Chevrolet and Goes Touring

"Now we know we're living." That is the verdict of a family in this city, in telling C. L. Smith, local Chevrolet dealer, at Colorado and Orange streets, how they felt after they had run their Chevrolet touring car for a month.

The family's problem was how to enjoy life in Southern California and how to do it econicically. A moderate income did not suffice for many extras, but the parents want the children especially to learn something of the heritage that is theirs in the Southland. Travel on foot was out of the question, and the crowded street cars took away the pleasure of Sunday and holiday jaunts to points of interest, so, after many family conferences, the father and mother worked out a budget that permitted the purchase of a car, and the Chevrolet was chosen as the car that offered sound value for every dollar invested.

"The result" says Mr. Smith, "is that the family is getting more pleasure out of life, and they are getting it at a cost that is so small as to be almost negligible. But the principal thing is that they have all of California at their command. They can take their car, pile the children and the picnic basket into it, and motor to the beauty spots that make touring here a continual joy and a road to health and happiness that the man condemned to walk can never fully realize."

OAKLAND SCORES IN ECONOMY RUN

Showing of Two Entries in Yosemite Dash Proves Merits of Cars

That closed cars can be operated almost as economically as open cars was demonstrated by the Oakland Six sedan entered in the Los Angeles to Yosemite Camp Curry economy run. The sedan driven by E. L. Peterson, averaged 18.18 miles on a gallon of gasoine while the Oakland touring car, driven by Harry Neville, twice sweepstakes winner in previous Yosemite runs, average 19.11 miles per gallon.

"When a sedan with its extra weight and wind resistance can travel 406 miles and average within one mile to the gallon of gasoline of what an open car can do, then closed cars have proven their economy of operation," says Thos. E. Ricketts, Glendale Oakland dealer, 420 East Colorado street.

"The Oakland Six sedan carried off the sweepstakes cup for closed cars for its splendid showing and also copped the cup for cars in its class, defeating the Oakland open car because of the method of scoring which takes into consideration the weight. The sedan set up a ten mile average of 34.18 against 32.86 by the Oakland open car.

"The Oakland touring car used no oil on the hard 400 mile grind, which substantiates the factory's policy in guaranteeing the motor against oil pumping for 15,000 miles. The sedan used but one pint of oil in spite of its increased weight and added wind resistance and the torrid heat which reached 120 degrees on the desert between Mojave and Bakersfield.

"Owing to the change in the rules this year, the various scores of all cars were cut down, and the Oakland's wonderful record by averaging 36.92 miles on a gallon of gasoline will probably stand for all time to come.

State Gas Tax Lower Than in Other Places

Information that the Nevada supreme court has rendered a decision holding that retailing of gasoline is not an inseparable function of a garage busness and authorizing the Carson City authorities to impose in their discretion a tax of 1 cent per gallon by ordinance has reached this city and is the subject of keen interest in view of the recent utterance by W. H. Marsh, chief of the division of motor vehicles, pointing out that many states impose a tax of 3 cents per gallon as compared with 2 cents in California.

City authorities in California also have under consderation in various municipalities imposition of a city tax on gasoline by which to increase revenues.

Carson City authorities brought suit against a garage and auto company to enforce collection of the tax. The garage company appealed from the decision of the lower cour,t which ruled the tax was legal, contending it already was paying for a city license and that a general garage business license provided for sale of gasoline.

There are 8,583,720 men engaged in manufacturing enterprises in the United States.

Dim Lights at Train Crossing, Is Warning

The recent death of a railroad employe due to being blinded by auto lights awaiting the passing of a freight train has brought the suggestion to the Automobile Club of Southern California that drivers dim their lights while waiting at railroad crossings. Investigation indicates that the railroad man made a mis-step, a confusing glare confronting him. The tragic occurrence was witnessed by a traffic officer in Fullerton, who reports the instance with the request that motorists dim their lights while waiting for the passing freight trains on which the trainman's life is constantly hazarded.

AGENT PROUD OF ECONOMY RESULT

Overland and Willys-Knight Score Heavily in Run Up to Yosemite

The Overland and the Willys-Knight cars showed their mettle and their economical operation on the run between Los Angeles and Yosemite last week, when two of the former make and one of the latter rolled into the park with first honors in their different classes.

The Overland Blue Bird, the 92 model, the latest output of the Willys-Overland Corporation, that has been causing such a sensation since it was placed on the market, showed an average gasoline consumption of 29.36 miles to the gallon over the 400 mile course, using 13⅝ gallons on the trip; the Overland 91 model led in its class with 28.03 miles to the gallon and a total consumption of 15⅝ gallons; while the Willys-Knight hung up a record of 23.53 miles on 17.9 gallons of gasoline.

In the sweepstakes the Overland Blue Bird compiled a total of 49.61 points for the run, with the Willys-Knight rolling up 45.53 points, finishing first and second respectively.

B. W. Sloan, of Smith-Sloan, Inc., 228 South Brand boulevard, local agents for the two lines, is proud of the record made by the Overland and the Willys-Knight, but he claims that, to anyone who knows the two machines, the economy shown in the Yosemite run is not surprising, as it simply bears out the claims that have been made and proven so frequently in the past.

The local agency is showing the Blue Bird now, equipped with balloon tires, and the new model is attracting a great deal of favorable attention.

Seeking Traveling Swindler Who Gets Cash on Sympathy

SAN JOSE, May 22.—"My wife is going to give birth to a baby right away! For heaven's sake let me have $25 so that I can get her into a hospital! I'm traveling and haven't any ready cash and I'll leave you my watch and ring as security," exclaimed an excited motorist who appeared at the A. L. Wise garage, 1505 South First street.

The garage proprietor glancing at the car in which was a pale-faced woman, felt sorry for the "plight" of the traveler and gave him the money.

Profusely thanking Wise, the stranger leaped into the expensive automobile and drove away. Examination quickly disclosed that the watch and ring were "phoney" and worthless.

Sheriff George Lyle has detailed several deputies to search for the swindler, who has worked the same story to financial advantage on other garage men in the Santa Clara valley recently.

Asks Motorists Keep Glare from Lights

"Serious auto accidents frequently occur during that period of one or two seconds that every motorist is completely blinded and driving without sense of direction when passing a car with glaring lights," said Will H. Marsh, director of the state division of motor vehicles today in asking California motorists to adopt the slogan "Kill the Glare —Save the Light."

"Perhaps it is even better to say that by killing the glare one can save lives as well as light," commented Marsh.

Reports show that the campaign against persons driving with glaring lights is being energetically prosecuted throughout the state. Since May 1, one thousand motorists daily have been stopped by officers and compelled to have their lights adjusted. Notably vigilant in enforcing this law are the officers in Fresno, Riverside, Sacramento, San Diego, San Mateo, Stanislaus and Yolo counties, said Marsh.

Governor Announces Road Work to Start

RIVERSIDE, May 22.—Orders for state highway engineers to start immediate work on a ninety-six mile stretch of the Mecca-Blythe highway between Coachella valley and Palo Verde valley have been given by the road commission, it was announced by Governor Friend W. Richardson here preparatory to his departure for Santa Ana. The work outlined by the govenor will cost at least $300,000 and possibly more.

BUICK'S FIGURES REVEAL ADVANCE

Sales Volume on 1924 Line Breaks All Records on Manufacturer

Figures for the months that have elapsed since the 1924 Buick models were placed on the market have just reached Tanner & Hall, South Brand boulevard, at Maple avenue, local dealers, and indicate the immense growth that has followed in the sales volume since the new line was first offered to the motorists of the country.

Comparing the present figures with those for 1923 W. A. Tanner points out that last year the motorists of the world bought 218,286 motor cars, paying $302,752,950 for them, exclusive of freight and United States taxes, "but," he adds, "since the introduction of the 1924 models Buick has broken all production records, including its own, for the manufacture of fine motor cars.

"Buick is now well on its way to the manufacture of its two-millionth car, which is a record unapproached by any other manufacturer of cars in the same class as the Buick, and another point that shows the supremacy of the Buick is the fact that, for the sixth consecutive year, Buick has been awarded first choice of space at the national shows, an honor that is only given to the manufacturer member of the N. A. C. C. with the largest volume of business.

"The cumulative evidence of all these facts" concludes Mr. Tanner, "shows beyond any question the lead that Buick maintains in the affections of the motoring public, and that confidence can only come from one thing, the absolute supremacy of the Buick automobile."

The value of musical instruments made in the United States in 1921 was $10,154,854.

Uncle Wiggily Bedtime Stories

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S BIRCH POP

Joie, Tommie and Kittie Kat, the pussy children, sat on the back stoop of their house looking sad.

"I wish I had ten cents!" mewed Tommie.

"I wish I had fifteen cents!" sighed Joie.

"What do you want fifteen cents for?" asked Tommie quickly. "Bottles of soda water pop only cost five cents apiece, and we could get one if we had ten cents. Ten cents is plenty—you shouldn't wish for too much."

"I was thinking of Kittie," mewed Joie, and he pointed his tail at their sister, who was sewing a green ribbon on a red dress for her doll with shoe button eyes.

"Thank you for thinking of me, Joie," said Kittie. "But I guess that's all the good it will do."

"I forgot about Kittie," said Tommie. "Yes, I wish we had fifteen cents. Then we'd buy three five cent bottles of soda water pop and have a picnic 'cause we got out of school early today."

"But what's the use of wishing?" sadly sighed Joie. "Nobody is going to give us fifteen cents."

"Unless maybe Uncle Wiggily would," spoke Tommie, with a gleam of hope in his yellow eyes.

"You mustn't ask Uncle Wiggily for money!" cried Kittie quickly. "Mother said you mustn't."

"That's right—she did," agreed Joie.

"But we could go over to his bungalow and talk to him," said Tommie. "And we could ask him if he liked soda water pop and if he said he did then we could say we liked it, too, but we couldn't get any 'cause we didn't have any money—that wouldn't be asking for it!"

"No, I don't guess it would," agreed Kitty. "We can do that."

So the three pussy children, holding their tails straight up in the air like fishing poles, so they wouldn't drag in the dirt, went over to the rabbit gentleman's bungalow. There he sat in the sunshine on the front porch, twinkling his pink nose.

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily, do you like wintergreen soda water pop?" asked Joie.

"No, can't say that I do," answered the bunny. "It gives me the pip."

"Oh!" sighed Tommie.

"Oh!" sighed Joie.

"Oh! Oh!" sighed Kittie.

"But if you were to ask me if I like birch soda water pop I would say yes, for I do," laughed Uncle Wiggily. "And I was just going to make some birch pop when you pussy children came along."

"Going to make birch pop!" cried Tommie. "I thought you had to buy it. And we wanted to buy some, only we didn't have the money and we thought maybe you would—" Tommie stopped suddenly, for Kittie was kicking him in the leg. "What's the matter?" he asked her.

"Don't you dare ask Uncle Wiggily for money!" she whispered.

"Who's going to?" mewed Tommie. "I was just going to tell him we like pop."

"Well, I was just going to make some birch pop, and I invite you to stay and see me do it, and then, if you want to, you may have some to drink," offered the bunny.

"Oh, goodie!" cried Joie, Tommie and Kittie Kat.

Uncle Wiggily hopped a little way into the woods, the three pussy children following. The rabbit found a birch tree and gnawed off some of the spicy inner bark. This he carried back to his bungalow.

Next he took some sweetened water and into it he put part of a yeast cake Nurse Jane gave him. Then into the sweet, yeasty water the rabbit gentleman put some of the spicy birch bark. Then he corked up the bottles and set them in the sun.

"Soon we shall have birch pop," he said.

"Will it have funny little bubbles in and make you feel queer up your nose?" asked Kittie.

"Yes," said Uncle Wiggily, "it will. The yeast will make the bubbles." The pussy children could hardly wait for the sun to warm the yeasty, sweetened pop so the bubbles would form, but at last the birch drink was made, and then it was set in a deep spring of water to cool. Then Uncle Wiggily got glasses and the pussy children waited eagerly.

Uncle Wiggily cut the string that tied the cork in a bottle.

"Pop" out flew the cork as from a toy gun.

"It's just like real soda water!" mewed Tommie. "It pops!"

"And see it foam!" exclaimed Joie.

"This is lovely!" said Kittie. "I want to make my nose feel funny," and the birch pop did when Kittie swallowed some of the bubbles.

Just when they were having a lovely time at the birch pop party

They went over to the rabbit gentleman's bungalow.

the unpleasant old Weasel came along, trying to catch the rabbit uncle. But Mr. Longears opened a fresh bottle and he aimed it at the Weasel.

"Bang!" out popped the cork and it hit the Weasel on the end of his nose, bringing tears to his eyes.

"Ouch!" howled the Weasel. "I never did like soda water, anyhow, especially birch pop." Then the pussy children laughed, and so did the rabbit gentleman, and they had lots of fun when the Weasel ran away.

And if the tin horn doesn't climb up the gas pipe and blow the chimney off the roof, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the chocolate bunny.

At the City Trustees' meeting last night a communication was read announcing that the new public library is about completed.

Henry T. Frith and his son Goldy Hight, have brought suit against the City Trustees and the street department, hoping to recover damages to the amount of $3015 on account of injuries received by falling from a vehicle. Mr. Frith claims that the accident was caused by the wheels of the vehicle passing into a deep rut on Pacific avenue between San Fernando road and Penn street.

LACE PARASOLS

LONDON, May 22.—Perhaps it is due to the revival of the carriage and pair in fashionable London—but, whatever the reason, the small lace parasol is here today. It is the sort that ladies once held up in their carriages, of black lace, for example, lined with peacock blue and mounted on an ivory handle.

WEAR SMALL HATS

LONDON, May 22.—A few wide-brimmed hats are seen, as is inevitable since, in Paris, hats are growing larger. But so far the small hat holds its own today, even for formal occasions. Bridesmaids themselves are wearing little hats instead of the picture variety.

Widow Is Minus Mate

CAPTAIN A. E. INGRAM, who wedded the widow of ENRICO CARUSO, found fault with the crudeness of Americans, so his wife advised him to take the next boat back to England, his native land, which he did.

Timely Views

"WAR NOT YET PAID FOR," SAYS MORGAN FIRM OFFICIAL

"It will not do to jump to the conclusion that the war has been paid for and that the problem of war finance is at an end. On the contrary, the remaining public debt of $21,500,000,000 is a matter of major importance." So says R. G. Leffingwell, member of J. P. Morgan and Co., discussing present financial conditions.

"Its treatment will have the most profound effect upon the welfare of our countrymen," declared the banker recently. "Of this entire debt more than $8,600,000,000, or 40 per cent, will mature within the next four years or thereabouts. Upwards of $3,000,000,000 of the debt so maturing consists of the bonds of the third Liberty loan, which are not subject to call for redemption before maturity, and are selling in the market at such prices at make extensive purchases of them by the treasury for retirement before maturity improbable, if not impossible.

"Of the remainder of the short debted debt upwards of $4,000,000,000 consists of treasury notes, the last of which now outstanding matures on Dec. 15, 1927, and $900,000,000, consists of treasury certificates.

"It derogates nothing from the skill with which the treasury operations have been conducted since the Victory loan was floated to call attention to the fact that on the whole they have borne the character of operations in debt reduction. The actual amount of debt reduction effected is approximately equal to the entire amount of the Victory loan, the last of the Liberty loans.

"Furthermore, these treasury operations, since June, 1920, have been conducted under the favorable auspices of an easing money market, with a consequent tendency toward appreciation in market price of issues made from time to time and facilitation of their absorption.

"It does not take much imagination, therefore, to understand that if the government's policy were materially altered, whether by undertaking new expenditures for whatever purpose, however beneficent, or by reducing revenues, to such an extent as to require the issue of United States government bonds, notes or certificates to an amount exceeding the amount of those maturing, the treasury would encounter very different conditions, and would be obliged to enter into competition with the bond market for investment capital.

"The net effect of the treasury's operations since Armistice day has been to release investment capital, both because of the important reduction in the gross debt, and also because of the policy persistently and wisely pursued of adhering almost exclusively to short maturities for meeting its current requirements. The capital fund thus released by the treasury of the United States has unhappily in large measure been lapped up for public or semi-public purposes by the borrowings of states and municipalities, subsidized and stimulateed by the constitutional exemption from taxation.

"Nevertheless, the treasury has conferred a priceless benefit upon the American people by pursuing the wise policy of debt reduction and relieving the business man and the farmer, the merchant and the industrialist in meeting their own requirements for financing, from the competition of the treasury."

"BROAD SCHOLARSHIP, NOT TRAINING OF SPECIALISTS SHOULD BE AIM OF COLLEGES."

The function of the American college is not to produce mere specialists, in the opinion of Dean Herbert E. Hawkes of Columbia College: broad scholarship should be the aim.

"There is every indication that a new tendency is gathering force in those colleges, both for men and women, where questions of education receive serious attention," says Dean Hawkes. "In the days of Pascal and Laplace it was possible for an individual to be a profound scholar in a wide field. The sciences of astronomy, physics, chemistry, mathematics, geology and biology were not so highly developed that it was impossible for one man to know all that any one knew about three or four of them and to have a fair knowledge of the others.

"But the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries witnessed a wide extension in every field of knowledge, so that it has become impossible to acquire thorough scholarship in several fields. Furthermore, these fields themselves have become so enlarged that a man is a geometer, or organic chemist, or a paleontolgist, rather than a mathematician, a chemist or a geologist. With this intensification of specialization it was inevitable that our entire system of higher education should feel the influence of the tendency.

The Breeding of Specialists.

"As the major departments in our colleges developed, the main excuse for their existence was naturally assumed to be the breeding of specialists. The teachers, themselves were specialists, usually trained in the German mode, and any other object of collegiate education seemed to them entirely unworthy. To present a survey course which aimed to give a wide rather than a deep view of a large field of scholarship was felt to encourage shallow superficiality.

"One can see clearly enough that scholarship could not have progressed to the point that it has reached if the general consensus of scholars of the nineteenth century had not chosen depth at the expense of breadth. But to assume that such a program should dominate the administration and teaching of our colleges at the present time neglects half of the problem, namely, the human half.

Specialists not Well Educated.

"The man is not well educated who is merely a specialist in one narrow field. Such minds are certainly very useful, and with human nature as it is we are not likely ever to be without a large number of persons of this type. But it is not the exclusive or the main function of the college to provide them.

"It may be that the production and employment of this type of scholar will become one of the functions of the industrial research laboratories and of the endowed foundations, but not the college. The college should perform a broader service. It should, to be sure, give its students a start in the various branches of scholarship, and that with such an impulse as to carry them as far as they may wish to go in the direction of specialization.

"But it should do much more. The college should show the place that each subject occupies in its relation to other domains. It should indicate the fruit that each field of intellectual endeavor has contributed to the progress of civilization. It should explain events, discoveries and ideas in terms not only of their origin but of their relations and values."

General News and Gossip from Staff Writers at Home and Abroad

For International News Service.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Niagara Falls has taken off the belt that designated it as champion among the cities attracting honeymooners and passed it reluctantly over to the new title-defender among the meccas of brides and bridegrooms—Washington, D. C.

In the national capital the bride and bridegroom are found in their wildest state. They usually may be recognized at once by the camera they carry. Their pockets and pocketbooks bulge with fresh rolls of film. They make snapshots incessantly.

If the reader be single and addicted to picture making, he in all liklihood makes photographs of landscapes, buildings and people. But when he becomes a bridegroom all that will be different. He will take pictures of the Capitol, of the White House and the little tumble-down red brick hovel where some great statesman was born, but always, always in the foreground, will be the sweetest girl in the world or the finest man in the world.

In the sunshiny days of honeymooning, capitals and countries are, of course, only background.

The itinerary in Washington of the visiting bridal couple has a common starting point. That's the White House. Politeness, quite naturally enough, decrees that one first call on the President and meet all his doormen if he is too busy.

The secretary in the Executive's office from his lookout behind a window has no difficulty spotting the bridal couple coming up the walk. The girl clings confidently to the muscular arm whose strength is as yet untried, but none the less undoubted. They have a certain timidity that all new mariners on this stormiest of stormy seas must have.

When the secretary sees them coming he fills out a blank pass with all but the names of Mr. and Mrs. Bridegroom. It will permit them to visit certain parts of the White House open in the daytime to the public.

The next stopping place on the itinerary is the Capitol. On the towering steps the bridegroom suddenly remembers to turn Exposure No. 3, showing his little wife at the White House door, back into the camera to bring Exposure No. 4 into place as she may snap him, hat in hand and a smile on his face, leaning against a column of the building whence come the nation's statutes and speeches.

They may look in on the Senate from the visitors' gallery, but they never stay long. Why waste time listening to Senator Blatant discussing the menace of the boll weevil when there is hand-holding to be done?

After trips to Mount Vernon, the Washington Monument, the Lincoln Memorial and the Congressional Library they are about ready to send a few postal cards to friends, buy their tickets and have their films developed.

Niagara Falls was never like this.

THE GLENDALE

Viola Dana in "The Social Code" is the Metro picture opening at the Glendale Theatre today. Supporting the star are Malcolm McGregor, Huntley Gordon, Cyril Chadwick and John Sainpolis.

The story is by Rita Wedman and tells of a social butterfly who after winging through bright-colored but treacherous daisy-fields of romance, proves herself in the end to be a real woman. Oscar Apfel directed.

The comedy at the Glendale Theatre today is Eddie Lyons in "Welcome, Uncle," one of his funniest. There is also a Pathe review and a current news reel on the program.

"Miss Dana has long been popular with patrons of this showhouse," says Manager William A. Howe of the Glendale Theatre. "and 'The Social Code' is one of her very best."

CHANEY GETS SLAPPED

Lon Chaney has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer for the leading role in "He Who Gets Slapped," Leonid Andreyev's play, which will be Victor Seastrom's first production for the newly consolidated Metro-Goldwyn-Meyer company.

DEMPSEY ON THIRD

Jack Dempsey has begun work on the third of the series of fight pictures he is making for Universal. The tentative title of the third is, "Received—An Orphanage," and it is being directed by Jess Robbins.

THE GATEWAY

Thomas Meighan in "The Confidence Man," a Paramount picture, opens at the Gateway Theatre today. In the supporting cast are Virginia Valli, Lawrence Wheat, Charles Dow Clarke, Margaret Seddon, George Nash and Dorothy Walters. The titles are by George Ade.

In the story, the strongest Meighan has had in months, the star has the role of Dan Corvan, the greatest of all confidence men. He is the master-mind type of crook rather than the plug-ugly kind. Corvan hooks an old sucker, Queritt, falls in love with a young country girl (Virginia Valli), plays philanthropist to get "in right" with the town-folk, collects from Queritt and prepares to skip town.

The big scene develops when Corvan is exposed for the crook he is. The action from then on is as fine as anything seen on the screen in many a moon and is full of genuine heart appeal.

IBANEZ' NEW ONE

Immediately upon the completion of Hunt Stromberg's production, "The Siren of Seville," Claire de Lorez, promising screen player of the year, will move her make-up box from the Thos. H. CLASSIC MOTIF

PARIS, May 22.—Head bands for the evening coiffure have taken a decidedly classic turn. In filigree platinum, copying designs such as Helen of Troy herself might have worn, they are pushed low over the eyebrows and the hair arranged rather high behind them.

WEAR WRIST BAGS

NEW YORK, May 22.—Wrist bags still exist—despite the popularity of under-arm purses. One of the newer bags is in beige duvetyn, in a pouch shape. It has a little carved brown wooden Chinese squatting rather incongruously on top of the clasp.

Diet and Health

By LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D.
Author of Diet and Health, with Key to the Caolries

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

Miss H.—For some time after the menstruation is first established, it may be irregular in amount and time. Yes, improper posture may have some bearing on the menstruation because an improper posture changes the direction of pressure on the uterus (womb.) When the abdominal pressure is normal it holds the uterus in its normal position. With stooped shoulders and protruding abdomen, as was affected some time ago in the debutante slouch, the pressure is directed so that the uterus may be bent backward. Normally, it is a rather freely movable organ, held by ligaments, and should, except when the bladder is full, bend forward slightly.

Take some gymnasium work if you can with corrective exercises to remedy your condition—hanging on hanging bars, shoulder and arm exercises, dumbbells, Indian clubs, rowing, swimming, etc.—all these are good. Send for my article on The Atonic Abdominal Wall.

C. H.—You must go to an eye specialist. It is possible you have some eye strain and that that is what is causing the irritation. A simple home remedy for washing the eyes is boric acid—one teaspoonful of the crystals or powder to a pint of boiling water. If you use the powder, mix it with a tiny bit of water first, to a cream and then boil with the balance. The crystals will dissolve readily. There is an eye ointment—one per cent yellow oxide of mercury, put up in little tubes that can be rubbed on at night.

Mrs. T.—Some dry skins are benefited more by glycerine solutions than by creams. Perhaps yours is one of that kind. Glycerine, one-quarter, and rose water, three-quarters, is a good preparation; or you can take a few drops of pure glycerine in the hands and add enough ordinary water to make it about that proportion, and rub on. Undoubtedly, when you correct your diet, as you say you are doing, your skin will be benefited also.

Mrs. L.—I have no special article on varicose veins. I have written on them several times in answers to correspondents. Will write again soon.

"Dear Doctor:—I am 53 years old and I did weight 248 pounds. Now I am down to 170 pounds, a loss of 78 pounds. I feel as though I were only 20 years old! I was always in poor health when I was fat. Now I can work like a beaver and feel better than I have in many years. I never can thank you enough for your instructions. I find that after reducing, it is not hard to keep from gaining—Grateful."

How long did it take you to reduce so much, dear Grateful? And how about your exercise? Tell us more—we are all interested.

Mrs. J.—The little girl of eleven who has jaundice and goitre should be under a physician's care. Don't try to treat her yourself.

J. P.—Don't try to remove a mole yourself. Go to a skin specialist, if it is in position where it will be irritated or if it is disfiguring; otherwise let it alone.

Mrs. H.—At 49, it is natural to begin to show signs of age, although much can be done by keeping the muscles of the face toned up and the skin soft. The facial masseurs are now using light pattings under the eyes and rather smart slaps over the rest of the face, instead of massage. An ice rub for a few minutes once a day, and some cream that you know agrees with your skin, at night, are the local treatments that I know of. Your general health, of course, has a good deal to do with the condition of your skin and face, and all methods to keep good general health—well balanced and sufficient diet, fresh air, exercise, mental repose, etc.—come in also.

Tomorrow—Answers to Mothers.

My Dear Followers:—When sending for material which we offer you please remember to enclose a stamped envelope bearing your full name and address. The pamphlet on reducing and gaining is the only one for which you must enclose four cents in stamps extra. Address your letters to me in care of this paper. Make them as brief as possible, not over 200 words, and type or write them legibly with ink. Please sign your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible, if they are of general interest. Don't forget the s. a.s. e. if you expect me to send you the information I have offered.

Beauties Follow Husbands

American couples will stage race to unexplored regions. In other words they will seek adventure. And the women will follow their husbands into the wilds. MR. AND MRS. ALEXANDER HAMILTON RICE (left) and MRS. RUTH ANDREWS TALYOR. Below, WILLIAM BELL TAYLOR.

By MARGERY PICKARD
Central Press Correspondent

NEW YORK, May 19.—There's no getting away from wives any more. Women have got so they'll follow their husbands anywhere.

Two women, one of whom is one of the richest and most prominent of society women, and the other a former member of the chorus of Mr. Ziegfeld, more or less well known Follies, are going to face peril with their husbands in a race to the strangest and most bewildering of the world's unexplored regions.

The race is to Mount Duda, which is described as a great table mountain which rises in sheer cliffs of 2000 feet from the jungle of innermost South America, where the Casiquiare joins the Rio Orinoco. Explorers who have traveled along the border have decided that any animals on the dizzy table must represent species cut off from the rest of the world millions of years.

One of the women in this extraordinary contest is Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice, a leader in society in New York and Newport. She and her husband, Dr. Rice, leader of six expeditions up the Amazon, sail shortly for Para, Brazil, starting point of a two-year exploration of the great rivers and jungles of the Amazon valley. They hope to discover the headwaters of the Orinoco and then penetrate the mysteries of Mount Duida.

The other woman is Mrs. William Bell Taylor, formerly Ruth Andrews of the Follies. Taylor is a young explorer who has crossed the South American continent in the equatorial regions five times—only twice by the same route. This time his principal objective is Duida.

Dr. and Mrs. Rice have probably spent $100,000 for equipment. With them will go Walter Hinton, the aviator who flew the NC-4 across the Atlantic. He will take sea-planes in which he will fly over and map impenetrable jungles. James W. Swanson, radio expert, will establish a radio station in the heart of the jungle to keep Dr. and Mrs. Rice in constant communication with the outside world. Ten experts from the leading universities and museums of the country will be in the expedition.

In contrast to this, Taylor will try to keep the cost of his expedition within $10,000. He will be accompanied only by his wife and two or three assistants. They will carry nothing but the necessary medical supplies, rifles and the cameras to record what they see.

Although Dr. and Mrs. Rice will have many months start of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, the youngest explorer says it will be a fair race. During the rainy season the Orinoco rises and floods the surrounding jungle. The swamp around Duida becomes a tangled and impenetrable morass—a moat miles wide which guards the secret of the mountain.

"It will not be low water until November," said Mr. Taylor, in explaining that he has as good a chance of getting to Duida first as Dr. Rice has.

"The supreme test will be one of physical endurance. Duida is less than 250 miles from the Equator. It is hotter than all sin there. The fever country surrounding it is probably the most unhealthy in the world."

Both Mrs. Rice and Mrs. Taylor have had experiences which fit them to go on hazardous expeditions.

Mrs. Rice accompanied her husband on his last two South American expeditions. She was with the party when it was turned back by hostile savages while trying to ascend one of the tributaries of th. Amazon in search of a tribe of white Indians, frequently heard of, but never seen. The attempt to find the white Indians was abandoned, when a cannibal tribe attacked the Rice party with a shower of poisoned arrows.

Dr. and Mrs. Rice are co-operating with the Brazilian government. Their general aim is a broad one. It is to make a sweeping investigation of the entire Amazonic region, mapping unknown portions, correcting faulty records of the past, and preparing the wild interior for the coming of civilization.

Mr. Taylor is a Fellow of the National Geographical Society. He also has standing commissions from the Bronx Zoo and the Lincoln Zoo in Chicago to bring back rare specimens of armadillos, monkeys, and other South American animals. If the expedition to Duida does not utterly exhaust his party he intends to go up the Putamayo, a westerly tributary of the Amazon, to study the Witota and Boraj cannibal tribes, which have never been photographed.

Beauty Chats

BABIES' BEAUTY PROBLEMS

Oh, yes, they have them, or rather their mothers have the problems to consider for them. Who doesn't want to possess the most beautiful baby? Look at the entries for all the baby contests! And who doesn't want the prettiest baby to grow up into the prettiest girl or the handsomest boy?

Well then, consider these problems, which affect the future looks of the child. We like our babies to walk and encourage them to do it. Perhaps rather, we do not discourage them enough, for babies are fascinated by the art of learning to walk, and travel about on their feet much more than they should. Think how wonderful it must be to be able, for the first time, to propel oneself across a room, when one had always depended upon the whim and understandings of some superior grown-up for the means of getting about! Of course they all walk too much.

So I have many letters from mothers wanting to know what to do about fallen arches in quite young children, and about bow legs. The most beautiful woman in the world would be a joke if she were bow legged—don't let your daughter develop that affliction! Braces can be worn in bad cases. The child must be kept off its feet a great deal until strength comes, special massage is necessary to help bring that strength. Sometimes nothing is needed but well made shoes that clasp the ankles gently but firmly enough to give them partial support. Babies' feet with fallen arches must be massaged too and proper shoes purchased. But in either case a good doctor should be consulted, for these apparently minor troubles may be more serious than you think.

The best part, always, is that young children respond to treatment in a way impossible with grown people, for their bones are soft and under proper treatment can be strengthened.

Bobbie—If a treatment with crude oil increases your tendency to oiliness of the scalp, do not use it for the dandruff, as the pilocarpine tonic will build up the health of your scalp so you will not have dandruff after a time.

Crude oil is best used on a dry scalp, and it will help matters even with an oily scalp when it comes to a special treatment for dandruff.

Plump—A vigorous massaging of the muscles of the arms will reduce them.

Betty B.—Consult the doctor about the lump left from a fall.

Dorothy—If you learn to play tennis or any other game in which you get plenty of exercise outdoors, you will find that most of your troubles have been solved. Such exercise will keep you from becoming so stout, and with improved circulation your lips will have more color in them.

Tomorrow—Foot Treatments.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes, in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So, if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the question.—The Editor.

The tomato is the only vegetable which may be canned by this simple method:

To Can Tomatoes Whole: Select firm, ripe tomatoes and lower them into boiling water in a cheesecloth bag from one to two minutes, then plunge the bag into cold water for an instant; the skins are now loosened and may be easily rubbed off with the fingers. Also remove cores with a pointed, slender-bladed knife, taking care not to cut into the soft flesh of the tomato.

Pack these whole, skinned and cored tomatoes into hot, sterilized glass jars and fill the jar with boiling water to within one-fourth inch of top; add one teaspoon of salt, put on new rubber and sterilized cover, and completely seal (this is, of course, different from the one-period Cold Pack Method, in which jars are partially sealed before processing, instead of completely sealed). Place the completely-sealed jars on a rack in your wash-boiler in water to cover them; this water in the wash boiler should be boiling up to the moment the jars are put in. Draw the wash-boiler to the back of the range, or take it off the stove completely, with the jars in it (again, this method differs from the One Period Cold Pack, in which the water in the wash-boiler is allowed to boil around the jars for a certain length of time). Do not touch the wash-boiler till the water around the jars is cold—this will tave five or six hours. Then take out jars, label, and store. This is an easy and most satisfactory method for canning the tomato, as the vegetable does not shrink (as by the usual method) and it may also be served sliced for salads in wintertime.

Chili Sauce: Remove skins from 12 ripe tomatoes as above directed, then cut the tomatoes in slices and put them in an agatewear pot off the range; add to the pot two large peeled and sliced onions, two red peppers (seeds removed) cut small, four cups of vinegar, two tablespoons of salt, two teaspoons of ground cinnamon, one teaspoon each of ground clove, nutmeg and allspice, and two cups of granulated sugar. Put this mixture over the fire and let simmer for two hours, stirring often. Then turn it at once into hot, sterilized jars and seal airtight at once. This relish is slightly sweet and is delicious to serve with cold meats.

Heart and Home

By MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

THE GREEN-EYED GOD

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I would like to relate my experience with jealousy for the benefit of all married couples and those who are soon to be married.

When quite young I married a very good man who loved a good time and whom women found interesting as he was good-looking and entertaining, neat and attractive. He never left me alone at night, didn't drink or swear and had no bad habits. I got everything I wanted and did what I liked, but I was insanely jealous. If we went to church, to a party or dance, to a neighbor's house, or had company at our house it was always the same,—I was always accusing him of being in love with some one else. I insisted on moving here and there to get away from certain ones, but the next place my imaginary rival would pop up again.

I was jealous of the hired girl, the Sunday School teacher, his relatives, and every woman. Jealousy knows no reason and we quarrelled constantly. I sat around in a dirty dress in a dirty house, crying and pitying myself, getting to look as badly as I thought I felt. I told my troubles over the telephone and to every one who would listen to me until I drove my husband to distraction. He said he felt ridiculous when it came to his ears that he was a woman chaser. He was the butt of cruel jokes. Finally he left me with all he had in the world and gave me the children who loved him dearly and whom he worshipped. But he was glad to get away from the trouble I was constantly stirring up.

I married again to a man a lot older than myself and then I found out what it was to live with a jealous person. He mistrusted everything I did and said and was always accusing me of doing unbelievable things. He drank and squandered everything my first husband left. Now I am working at anything I can get to do, with neither home, friends, health nor money, and my children are scattered around working for a living, growing up bitter and dissatisfied, being cheated out of a good home and a kind father.

Jealousy is a form of insanity and there ought to be a place to treat those cases to bring back sane reasoning. If my first husband had beat me or locked me up to bring me to my senses before it was too late, I would have been a happy woman today with my darlings around me while I grew old.

ONE WHO WAS JEALOUS.

You have certainly paid dearly for indulging in jealousy. A jealous person does not want to use reason and prefers a perfect orgy of self-pity. Without a doubt most divorces could have been avoided if it had not been for that demon, jealousy. I hope your letter will be a warning to jealous people. I could also relate true cases which have been just as tragic as yours and just as unnecessary.

MEANINGLESS

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl in my teens. I have been going with a boy two years my senior. He always says he loves me and he surely acts that way. The other day he told me he would like me to forget him as that is the only way he could show his liking for me. Do you think he would say that if he really loved me?. I. S. L. H.

I imagine the boy really cares for you. His statement seems to me meaningless, but perhaps he wanted you to understand that his regard is so deep that he will never forget you even if you turn from him.

From the Book Of Life

A CLASSIC, literaly speaking, and according to the usual definition is an old author canonized by admiration, and an authority in his particular style.

Charles Sainte-Beauve, the foremost French critic of the nineteenth century, and, in the view of many, the greatest literary critic of the world, decided that a true classic is "an author who has enriched the human mind, increased its treasure, and caused it to advance a step; who discovered some moral and unequivocal truth, or revealed some eternal passion in that heart where all seemed known and discovered; who has pressed his thought, observation or invention, in no matter what form, only provided it be broad and great, refined and sensible, sane and beautiful in itself; who has spoken to all in his own peculiar style which is found to be also that of the whole world, a style new without neologism, new and old, easily contemporary with all time."

"Such a classic," he explains, "may for a moment have been revolutionary; it may at least have seemed so, but it is not; it only lashed and subverted whatever prevented the restoration of the balance of order and beauty."

"Maybe," Shinte-Beauve ventures, "an age is coming when there will be no more writing. Happy those who read and read again, those who do their reading can follow their unrestrained inclination!

"There comes a time in life when, all our journeys over, our experiences ended, there is no enjoyment more delightful than to study and thoroughly examine the things we know, to take pleasure in what we feel, and seeing again the people we love; the pure joys of our maturity.

"Then it is that the word classic takes its true meaning, and is defined for every man of taste by irresistible choice.

"Then taste is formed, it is shaped and definite; then good sense, if we possess it at all, is perfected in us. We have neither more time for experiments, nor a desire to go forth in search of pastures new. We cling to our friends, to those proved by long intercourse. Old wine, old books, old friends. We say to ourselves with Voltaire these delightful lines:—

"'Let us enjoy, let us write, let us live, my dear Horace! . . . . I have lived longer than you: my verse will not last so long. But on the brink of the tomb I shall make it my chief care—to follow the lessons of your philosophy—to despite death in enjoying life—to read your writings full of charm and good sense—as we drink and old wine that revived our senses.'

"In fact, be it Horace or another who is the author preferred, who reflects our thoughts in all the wealth of their maturity, of some one of those excellent and antique minds shall we request an interview at every moment; of some one of them shall we ask a friendship which never deceives, which could not fail us; to some one of them shall we appear for that sensation of serenity and amenity (we have often need of it) which reconciles us with mankind and ourselves."

RELIEVED CONSTIPATION

"I have been troubled the last 4 or 5 years with constipation and have tried everything under the sun, but could not find any relief until I got FOLEY CATHARTIC TABLETS, and you can bet they are the pills," writes Robert E. Smith, 417 N. Robert St., Ludington, Mich. FOLEY CATHARTIC TABLETS give quick relief from constipation, also act on the liver. Especially comforting to stout persons. Refuse substitutes.

Who's Who

PHILIP SNOWDEN

Another interesting chapter in the story of Great Britain's peaceful political revolution was written the other day when Philip Snowden, socialist chancellor of the exchequer, presented the first Labor budget to parliament.

P. SNOWDEN

The Budget, among other things, abolishes, Aug. 1, tariff duties imposed as war measures by Reginald McKenna when he was chancellor of the exchequer in the last liberal government. The corporation profits tax is also abolished.

Snowden's friends will tell you it was only natural that he should be the man to help make this bit of British history. He has lived with socialism and figures all his life. In his first twelve years in parliament, 1906 to 1918, his speeches in the budget debates were called classics. They were keenly critical but constructive.

Figures always have been a passion with him since boyhood. His father was a journeyman weaver, deeply religious. Philip started on his statistical career when he was successful in a civil service examination and landed a position in the customs department. Then a bicycle accident disabled him. He was forced to give up his customs post.

He gave up most of his time to reading and writing. Letters sent the press drew attention to him. Later, recovered though crippled, he became a speaker and a diligent worker in the I. L. P., the principal socialist body connected with the labor party.

His friends tell how he was then rated a better speaker than Ramsay MacDonald, now prime minister.

His frank utterances caused him to be politically ostracised during the war but he continued to express his views in various papers though barred from speaking in the house of Commons.

DR. EDWIN BRUCE GODFREY

Once more Europe has turned to America for aid in fighting plague and pestilence. Dr. Edwin Bruce Godfrey, Bloomington, Ill., physician has been called to direct a campaign against typhus and other diseases in Switzerland and the Balkans. Thousands already have succumbed to the dread typhus plague in those sections.

The call came from the League of Nations and brings to light just one of the many activities of the league. Dr. Godfrey served as a surgeon with the Red Cross in France, Poland and Russia during the world war and continued these activities after the conflict ended. He is of the younger school of physicians and his work has attracted attention almost since his graduation from college.

The flag raised at Cambridge, January 2, 1776, by Washington, is said to have been composed of 13 red and white strips with the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew emblazoned on the blue canton, in place of the present stars.

THE AFTER HOUSE

did not. I think, just at first, he was afraid he had done it; but he did not. I believe that, and you must."

I believed her—I believed anything she said. I think that if she had chosen to say that I had wielded the murderer's axe on the Ella, I should have gone to the gallows rather than gainsay her. From that night, I was the devil's advocate, if you like. I was determined to save Marshall Turner.

She wished us to take her taxicab, dropping her at her hotel; and, reckless now of everything but being with her, I would have done so. But McWhirter's discreet cough reminded me of the street car level of our finances, and I made the excuse of putting on more suitable clothing.

I stood in the street, bareheaded, watching her taxicab as it rattled down the street. McWhirter touched me on the arm.

"Wake up!" he said. "We have work to do, my friend."

We went upstairs together, cautiously, not to rouse the house. At the top, Mac turned and patted me on the elbow, my shoulder being a foot or so above him.

"Good boy!" he said. "And if that shirtfront and tie didn't knock into eternal oblivion the deck washing on the Ella, I'll eat them!"

What did Mac and Leslie find on the Ella? Tomorrow—"The Thing."

Six Tallies In Third Prove Too Much for Seattle Crew to Overcome

By C. R. SIMMONS
For Southland News Service.

LOS ANGELES, May 22.—A third inning rally in which six runs crossed the platter proved too much for the Seattle Indians to overcome at Washington park yesterday afternoon and the Vernon Bengals copped their second victory over Red Killifer's gang, 9 to 1. Essick's aggregation pounded out thirteen bingles off the delivery of Jim Bagby and Williams. Leon Cadore allowed nine hits, but kept them well scattered.

Seattle started as though they meant business when they took the lead in the first canto with one run. Vernon tied up things in their half of the second and then the runs simply poured over in the third when five hits were clouted by the Bengals. Chadbourne, Deal, D. Murphy, Warner and Cadore did the hitting in this frame, with Warner clouting a double with the bases full. Menosky hit one for four bases as leadoff man in the sixth.

ANGELS 6, SOLONS 2

SACRAMENTO, May 22.—Marty Krug revamped his lowly Angels here yesterday and finally won a game from the Senators, 6 to 2.

Marty took third, put McAuley at second and sent in Tom Hughes to pitch. It was a case of old blood for young. Wally Hood, beneath whom the years are slowly slipping under, also had a big share in the performance, for he drove in the first five runs scored by the Seraphs, a man's share of the matinee. Charles Hall started for the Senators, but was relieved by Vinci.

Long Tom Hughes had his fast and curve balls working good. The Solons did not get a run off of him until the eighth, when Koehler, pinch hitter, drove the ball out of the lot.

Travel Costs Too High and Gates Too Small, Wade Killefer Claims

LOS ANGELES, May 22.—If Bill Lane will transfer his Salt Lake baseball club to San Diego, Long Beach or Vancouver, Wade Killefer says he will vote for Lane to receive 50 per cent of the gate receipts on the road instead of the customary 40 per cent.

Killefer claims the trip to Salt Lake is a nightmare for every club owner. It costs about $3,500 to make the trip and a week day attendance of 750 persons is a crowd. The Vernon club, fighting Salt Lake for second place Sunday, drew only 4,000 fans at the ball park.

"I believe conditions will not get better at Salt Lake City," Killefer said today. "It would be better for Lane to move his franchise to one of the coast towns. Everyone in the league would save money.

"Because he might have to go into a smaller city than his club now is stationed at I for one advocate that his club get a little extra money.

"Every club in the league with the exception of Sacramento gets 40 per cent of the gate receipts on the road. Sacramento, because of a special ruling, gets 45 per cent. It would be cheaper for the clubs to have Salt Lake in San Diego, Long Beach or Vancouver because of the saving in railroad fare."

Indictments against Rickard and six others, whose names have not been made public, were returned here by the Essex county federal grand jury.

One of the few "naturals" that are scheduled for the open-air season will bring together Harry Greb, the human windmill, and M'sieu Chapdelaine, better known as Jack Delaney, conqueror of "Pop 'Em Paul" Berlenbach. Paul was being primed for this bout, but ran into a snag the night he met the M'sieu and is now starting up the ladder again.

Delaney is a French Canadian, born up in St. Francis, Canada. His people moved to Holyoke, down in the States, when Jack was a wee one and he went to work as a bobbin boy in the mills. Late Papa Chapdelaine took his brood to Bridgeport, Conn., to work in other mills. Here Delaney, who had grown to be a big, strong chap, boxed in a gymnasium where Martin Canole, the oldtime lightweight, saw him and was instantly taken with the good form the young fellow was showing.

Another who was pleased with Jack was Jennings, a manager of fighters and promoter up Bridgeport way. He signed Jack up for three years and started to make a real fighter out of him.

The town folk couldn't pronounce Chapdelaine, so they always referred to Jack as "that chap Delaine." So Jennings changed his name to Jack Delaney.

Delaney is a splendid all round man, being fast, clever, a good ring general and a good socker. He has never been in the limelight as few of the good men would tackle him. By stopping Berlenbach, Jack is now in line for a few big battles the coming year. He is 24 years old and tips the scales at 163 pounds.

Carpentier Looks to Speed Ability Now

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., May 22.—Without any announced intention of making the battle with Tommy Gibbons a foot race, Georges Carpentier has added sprinting to his training schedule at his cottage on the shores of Lake Michigan. He runs a hundred yards at each workout and Francoics Descamps, the enthusiastic and excitable manager, said he had clocked Georges in eleven flat. The boulevardier's sparring staff is complete now with Frenchy Ledoux and Soldier King, light heavyweights, and Jack Taylor, negro heavyweight, in camp.

Sammy Mandell, himself a lightweight title aspirant, joined Tommy Gibbons' camp. Gibbons works daily at 2:30 o'clock and Carpentier at 3:30 to allow the visiting experts, who are beginning to appear in thickening droves for the May 31 fight, to view both workouts.

BASEBALL QUESTION BOX

If you have some question to ask about baseball—
If you want a rule interpreted—
If you want to know anything about a play or player—
Write John B. Foster, the man who helped make the rules under which the game is played today. If you want a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed, envelope. Otherwise your question will be answered in this column.
Address: John B. Foster, Special Baseball Correspondent of the Evening News, 811 World Building, New York.

QUESTION—If a batsman hit the ball inside the third and first base line and hit it within a fielder's reach and the player miss it is that a hit?

ANSWER—That is up to the judgment of the man who is scoring the game.

QUESTION—When playing baseball if the batter hits the ball far enough to make a home run, and is about to touch home plate and the ball is in the diamond, is it counted a home run?

ANSWER—It is a home run even if the ball is with one bound of the runner.

QUESTION—What are the pitching records of Morrison of Pittsburgh and Luque of Cincinnati for 1923? What was the percentage and number of games won by Cleveland when they won the pennant in 1920?

ANSWER—Luque had an earned run record of 1.93 and Morrison of 3.49. Cleveland won 98 games with a percentage of .636.

QUESTION—Two are out and runner on first and third. Batter hits the ball to the shortstop who throws to second, making a force play. The man on third scores before the out is made. The umpire called him safe and gave his team a run. Was that right?

ANSWER — The umpire was wrong. The run did not count. The third man out was forced out. Read rule 59.

WINS GOLF TITLE

PORT RUSH, England, May 22.—Miss Joyce Wethered, leading woman golfer of Great Britain, easily won the British championship today, defeating Mrs. Cautley in the final round. The score was 7 up and 6 to play.

Helen Thrills Old London, Not by Play, But Her Eyeshade

The most interesting item in the day's sport news comes in a dispatch from dear old Lunnon, which states that Helen Wills, California's 17-year-old school girl, national tennis champion, "delighted the spectators at a match by wearing her famous eye shade."

If the English folks can get a kick out of anything like that, they would die of heart failure on some of the courts in Southern California.

ATHLETES READY FOR MEET IN L. A.

Nearly All Stars Stick to Colors of Alma Mater for Season's Event

Vic Kline, outstanding prep sprinter of the year, and his school mate, Lee Barnes, pole vaulter, will wear the colors of the Hollywood Athletic club when they appear in the Olympic tryouts to be held at the Coliseum next Saturday. According to other reliable information, Eads, who does six feet in the high jump; Smith, a cracker jack quarter miler and an unknown gentleman as yet by the name of Pitts, discus man, will also represent the Hollywood institution.

With the announcement that the Trojan athletes will represent U. S. C. and that the boys from Pomona and Occidental will wear the uniform of their alma mater leaves the Los Angeles Athletic club, so long a ruler in things athletic, rather out in the cold.

Tiny Hartranft, star weight man of the United States, states that he will wear the Cardinal red. Hartranft used to perform for the Los Angeles club, but when he stayed out of competition for a year his membership was cancelled, and now that he is getting good again, the L. A. A. C. authorities have been after him to perform in their colors. He is loyal to Dick Templeton, and so far has turned a deaf ear to the Los Angeles men.

High Hurdle Race

The race in the high hurdles should provide one of the great spectacles of the day, when such as Dye, Daggs, Maxwell, Nichols, Grumbles, Anderson and others tangle in a race for the right to make the trip to Boston and possibly Paris. The news has leaked out from the Sagehen institution that Bob Maxwell is beating his former time every day in the high stick event, and many look for him to give Leighton Dye and Charlie Daggs a stiff race. Kenny Grumbles of U. S. C. also is going quietly about his way and practicing regularly for the event. He is in the best condition he has been this year, and may run his chum Dye, who with Daggs is the favorite, to a close finish.

The tryouts will have all the appearance of a three ring circus. Gymnasts and acrobats are going to "do their stuff," and amateur boxers and wrestlers will meet during the afternoon.

Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world, will leave his grease paint on the Universal lot and has promised to show himself to aid the cause. Tickets have been going well and the largest crowd that ever witnessed a track event in southern California is expected.

The meet will start promptly and run off without delays, according to Bob Weaver, on account of the great number of events that must be staged to determine who are the outstanding athletes of the southwestern section, including southern California, Arizona and New Mexico.

O'DOWD SUSPENDED

ATLANTA, Ga., May 22.—Dan O'Dowd, Boston light heavyweight, who lost a ten round decision bout with Young Stribling has been suspended for sixty days from "all boxing bouts" by the Atlanta Boxing commission. The commission charged him with "stalling and shamming" and with refusing to fight.

The ruling, it was said, will be effective in all cities where boxing commissions are recognized.

ARGUE MAY LAND JAUNT TO PARIS

Will Endeavor to Place In Pentathlon Tomorrow at Patterson Field

By R. C. FRANKLIN
For Southland News Service.

LOS ANGELES, May 22.—J. Clifford Argue, Occidental's iron man on the track for the past three years, is still to get a chance to make the trip to Boston with local athletes for the final tryouts for a place on America's Olympic team. Argue will run off the five events included in the pentathlon tomorrow afternoon on Patterson field. His times and marks will then be compared with those of Morton Kaer, winner of the pentathlon Saturday, and should authorities think the Oxy star has a good chance to winning in the east he will be taken along.

Argue first decided not to enter the tryouts at all, because he wanted to go to work. Then he changed his mind, but was in no condition to compete a week ago, having abandoned training and entered baseball on returning from the east. Last Saturday he again donned a track suit and began extensive training in the sprints and weight throwing and now feels fit to go out and compete his best.

In addition to trying for the pentathlon, Argue will enter the broad jump at the open tryouts at the coliseum Saturday, and he has a chance to place in this event and be taken east, where he will then make an effort to win the pentathlon, should he not round into condition sufficiently to make the grade tomorrow. Many followers believe that the star will be taken east at any rate for his records of the past are sufficient to warrant his competition there.

Argue will have plenty of competition tomorrow afternoon in Buckman, Carter, Powers and Spangler, who are also working out for Saturday's tryouts. This competition will serve to make the iron man stretch himself out somewhat and will probably bring out his best times and marks for the five events.

Expect Dutch Leonard To Pitch for Vernon

It is reported from Detroit that Dutch Leonard, once star southpaw of the Tigers, would rejoin the team soon. Leonard quit in 1922 following a salary dispute, and played ball with Fresno. Under Judge Landis' ruling, a year must expire after he plays independent ball before he can be reinstated in the big leagues.

Leonard, who is said to be in good shape, would be a welcome addition to the faltering staff of hurlers which Cobb has at his command.

RINGSIDE GOSSIP

By FAIR PLAY
By Special Leased Wire to The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1924.

NEW YORK, May 22.—Ad Stone's fault of being able to hit hard and yet without the knockout snap was revealed against Tommy Loughran in Philadelphia on Monday. Ad got to Tommy's body time and again but this favorite wallop of the ex-Marine's, failed to slow up his opponent who waged a fast and game bout on his own account. In fact, in the last four rounds Loughran stood up to the gaff and sent in as good as he received. Whether or not Stone's showing will do him out of the proposed fight in London with Jack Bloomfield, remains to be seen.

What to do with Romero Rojas is a question that has been occupying the minds of promoters since Floyd Johnson wafted him out of the limelight recently. Romero, of course, is entitled to a living and it is up to the promoters to provide one for him.

It would be a pity to waste the publicity that Romero has received, and as a matter of fact it still is not without value. There is talk that Romero may be sent into the ring in Jersey as one of the semi-finalists when Weinert and Ad Stone meet. If this were to be done and the Chilean should win convincingly over some such good third rater as Joe McCann—who has been mentioned as an opponent for Romero—he could go on the road and pick up a lot of no-decision money.

If the projected Leonard-Walker match falls through, the fault may be laid at the feet of the welter champion. But there will be a lot of fans who will not blame Mickey. Leonard in meeting the Jersey man at the welter limit is taking no chances with his own title and if he should happen to lose to Walker it would not hurt him much. It would not, for example, be the first time he suffered adversity in meeting a welterweight. Walker, on the other hand, is risking his title against a real fighter, and naturally wants a piece of change for doing it.

Billy Gibson says that Leonard will fight for $150,000 as his share. There does not seem at present to be a promoter who sees his way clear to give this sum to Leonard and a larger sum to Walker. Not that the fight would not be worth it. But it would require building up in the public mind and it is pretty late now to begin to spring stuff for a summer battle.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

CHICAGO, May 22.—By defeating the Phillies 8 to 6 here yesterday while the Dodgers were beating Cincinnati, the Cubs went into first place in the National league pennant race. Grover Alexander was the hero and it was his sixth victory of the season. He has suffered but one defeat. Jimmy Ring, who went the route for the visitors, had a poor start, the Cubs hammering him for six hits and five runs in the opening inning. After that he pitched fine ball.

Two L. A. Fighters to Make Trip to Paris

Of the seven new amateur boxing champions selected in Boston last night, the Los Angeles Athletic club furnishes two. Fidel La Barba won the 112-pound crown and Joe Salas in the 126-pound class. They will represent America on the Olympic boxing team.

The other Los Angeles boys who made the trip east with George Blake did not do so well. Ad Allegrini was eliminated in the 160-pound finals by Ben Funk of Yale, while Joe Woods, 175-pounder, and Jackie Fields, 126-pounder, were eliminated in the respective classes in the semi-finals.

With two champions and one fighting through to the last match, the Los Angeles club did exceedingly well in the tryouts, which brought the crack amateurs from all parts of the country into competition.

FOR GAME'S SAKE

By LAWRENCE PERRY
By Special Leased Wire to The Glendale Evening News, Copyright 1924

NEW YORK, May 22.—Syracuse's Varsity, Junior-Varsity and Freshman crews will try out the Annapolis rowing course on the Severn River today in preparation for Saturday's regatta against the Navy crews. The Orange showed by defeating the Massachusetts Tech Varsity 8 that Ten Eyck has assembled a workmanlike combination, qualified to give the Navy an eagerly awaited test.

Watching Bill Tilden in his recent appearances in this vicinity as the chief drawing card in club exhibitions for funds of various sorts, one received a clear idea as to what publicity does for an athlete.

Men and women who had never attended a tennis match, who knew little or nothing about the game, turned out to see this great lawn tennis star about whom so much turmoil has been raised. There was, of course, the general impression that Bill, for some unjust, unwarranted reason, was under attack and such a feeling always invests a man with an aided attractiveness.

And Bill, who is not so good an actor as he is a lawn tennis player,—albeit a good actor at that—rose to the situation commandingly. At Montclair and at Maplewood, for example, he displayed all his stuff and in fact, rose at times to amazing heights, while all the characteristics of manner that distinguish him in regular tournaments were by no means missing.

In the end, in auctioning off the racquet with which he had played, Tilden had opportunity to display his histrionic ability, and availed himself of it fully.

In brief, what is happening to Tilden, is perfectly clear. He is putting lawn tennis on the broad public map and he himself is rapidly getting to occupy a place in the public mind such as Babe Ruth, Ty Cobb, Walter Hagen and Dempsey occupy.

Lewis Retains Crown; Throws Italian Champ

PHILADELPHIA, May 22.—The king's crown in the wrestling kingdom still rests on the head of Ed "Strangler" Lewis today. The champion lost the first fall in a bout here to Renato Gardini, Italian champion, but won the second, and the challenger was unable to come back for the third and deciding tussle.

M'GRAW IS READY TO ANSWER BAKER

Giants' Boss Is Going to Wait Until They Meet In Philly, However

NEW YORK, May 22.—John J. McGraw rode into town on a crutch last night and delivered himself of a brief oration, dealing with William F. Baker, who charged our John with tampering with ball players, and with the New York Giants themselves, whose sprightly record is four victories in the last fourteen games played. John threw his knee out in some manner not altogether clear. He wishes he could do the same to some of his pitchers.

Asked for the promised statement he was to make on the Baker controversy upon his return to New York our McGraw said:

"Baker waited until I got to St. Louis before making public his statement. I'll wait until I get to Philadelphia before answering him. I may have something to say that will interest him."

Wait Eight Days

The National league schedule calls for the Giants to appear in Philadelphia for two games on Memorial day. The promised meeting of McGraw and Baker, therefore, is eight days removed. If it were not for the fact that the McGraw-Baker situation reflects on the integrity of baseball the writer could cheerfully wait eight years.

Speaking of his ball club and its fall from first to third place while on the road, McGraw said that the team was playing even worse than the box scores indicated. He blamed the uncertain weather for the fact that the Giants had failed to maintain their early speed, claiming that cold weather had retarded pitching development and that lack of morning practice had stopped the hitting. The Chicago Cubs, he added, were the best team he had seen this season, but admitted that the Pirates and Reds were yet to come under his well known observation.

Workouts Needed

"It hasn't been the pitching alone," quoth Mr. McGraw from the depths of a wheel chair. "When the pitching was good, the fielding was bad or the hitting fell off. I am informed that young Dean pitched a good game in Pittsburgh the other day but that his support was terrible. Bad weather has upset the whole league and teams that should be up at the top are floundering around near the bottom.

"For four weeks the Giants haven't had any morning practice, and that, I think, accounts for their light hitting. The Reds have played most of their games at home and we have played most of ours on the road.

"That is one reason I believe the Giants will come back. I am not worrying about the fact that they are in third place because they have the stuff and it will show ultimately."

SPORT WISDOM

By WALTER CAMP
By Special Leased Wire to The Glendale Evening News, Copyright 1924

NEW YORK, May 22.—Every golfer in the country should take to heart the lesson offered at Garden City last week-end when Walter Richard, standing five up on Arden Robbins when they drove off the tenth tee, lost out to the veteran on the nineteenth hole.

On the early commanding lead seems to be the hardest situation in the world, even for the experienced golfer to contend with. What happens to the brains of the man with such a lead no one can say but it certainly happens in hundreds of cases every season and spells disaster.

They tell a story of one British amateur champion, who, later, in a university match, stood eight up at the turn and still succeeded in losing the match.

The decision of President George W. Wightman, of the United States Lawn Tennis Association to recommend a special meeting of the Association to review the player-writer question, holds promise of peace once more in the tennis world. And that—no matter what the technical results of the meeting—will be welcomed by tennis lovers throughout the land. It had become all too evident that if the player writer dispute continued the quarrel would line up friend against friend and player against player and result in nothing but harm to the game.

WILSON KIDS WIN

A picked team at Wilson Avenue school defeated a visiting team from the Glendale Academy at baseball yesterday on Wilson Avenue grounds, 7 to 5. Earl Fiock and Arthur Hudson were the battery for the winning team.

SOX GOING STRONG

The Red Sox won their fifth straight when they defeated Detroit, 5 to 4, and shot up to within half a game of the leading Yankees.

CUBS REACH TOP

Chicago woke up today to find the Cubs at the head of the National league pennant race, the Phillies being beaten, 8 to 6.

Boston made a strong rally in the ninth, but could not overcome the Cardinal's lead and St. Louis won, 8 to 5.

EXPERT TO PASS ON PAVING WORK

Property Owners to Secure Engineer's Opinion on Contract, Is Plan

Property owners of Glendale avenue will employ a disinterested expert paving engineer to inspect and report upon the quality of the paving recently installed on Glendale avenue, and make a formal protest for the purpose of further court action, if a suggestion made by T. H. Menk at the regular meeting of the Glendale Advancement association is favorably acted upon by the members of the association.

A formal protest probably will be made to the City Council before the expiration of the protest period, it was stated by several members of the association at the meeting, which was held at the Harriett Mae tea room. This formal protest will be for the purpose of basing a court action in the event the paving does not stand up.

Opinion Divided

Several members of the association reported on the condition of the paving and the question of its quality was argued pro and con at the meeting. Some believe the paving will cure properly and be all right, while others are of the opinion that it is too soft and will creep in warm weather.

Mayor Spencer Robinson has promised to issue a clean-up week proclamation to have all weeds on vacant lots cut, Henry Jacke, member of a committee appointed last week, reported today. The proclamation, he said, would call attention of the residents of Glendale to the fire hazards of vacant lots covered with weeds, as well as the looks.

President C. W. Ingledue, who presided at the meeting, named Mrs. M. L. Tight, Mrs. Henry Jacke and Mrs. C. R. Sargent as a committee to conduct a membership drive.

Check Flood Balance

W. E. Mercer, C. R. Sargent and W. McIntyre were appointed members of a committee to ascertain the amount of money due Glendale from flood control bonds remaining unspent and see if the money can be used in preliminary work before the fall program of flood control work is started.

In the absence of Secretary Herman Nelson, T. H. Menk acted as secretary.

SEEK REPUBLICAN PLATFORM PLANKS

feature particularly if William Gibbs McAdoo is the candidate as he thinks the bill passed by Congress doesn't go far enough.

More disturbing perhaps than the bonus is what the Republican platform shall say on the subject of the world court. President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes favor the adherence of the United States world court created by the League of Nations but with reservations stating that America does not become committed to any action of or membership in the league itself. Senator Lodge has proposed an alternative scheme which means a new conference and an abolition of the court which has already been accepted by forty nations. Under the circumstances, the president feels the present court offers the only practicable course.

If no action is taken by the Senate disposing of one or the other of these plans before the Republican convention in Cleveland, the platform makers will have a difficult time framing a plank that will enable Mr. Coolidge to keep on favoring the present world court. Already such organizations as the National Association of Manufacturers have gone on record as against the Coolidge plan and favoring the Lodge idea.

The senior senator from Massachusetts opposed the president on the bonus and led the Republican party in its overthrow of the veto. Conferences have begun with the hope of persuading the Republican majority leader to permit a vote to be taken without an effort to commit the Republicans to a party at all on the matter. In other words Mr. Coolidge hopes that if the proposal can be voted on it will have enough Democratic support to overcome Republican defections and that even if the proposal is defeated it will be easier for the makers of the platform.

Should the Coolidge proposal fail to get a two-thirds vote, it will then be in order to seek an alternative plan and Mr. Coolidge would be able to repeat in the Republican platform what he said in his first address to Congress, that he favors a world court instead of "the" world court and that he is willing to accept whatever plan will meet the wishes of two-thirds of the Senate.

Tax Bill Situation

Until Congress passes a tax reduction bill of some kind, the dilemma of the president with respect to the writing of a platform on which he can be run will be unsolved. Mr. Coolidge favored the Mellon plan. Congress has rejected it. There are two major features in the pending bill which probably will be eliminated—publicity of income tax returns and the graduated tax on undistributed profits. With them out of the bill, Senate leaders are predicting that Mr. Coolidge will sign it. If he does, the Republican platform can "point with pride" to the reduction accomplished and promise further cuts next time.

All this indicates conclusively just why the president is anxious to have Congress adjourn by June 7. The insurgents and the Democrats recognize the strategy for it concerns them, too. How can they attack the record of the present Congress until the two Houses have actually ended their work? Adjournment of Congress will be forced by political considerations in which the Republicans and Democrats are likely to have a common interest but the insurgents and radicals may upset the whole thing by a filibuster in June.

For eight long years the Victor dog has sat peacefully in front of the Glendale Music company's store at 119 North Brand Boulevard without voicing protest at the attacks of unfriendly canines or manifesting joy over the attentions of small children. Not even one low growl has escaped through his papier mache jaws.

But now all is changed. Some uncanny power has endowed the creature with super-human intelligence. Passers-by have been startled at hearing him expressing his feelings loudly and distinctly for the benefit of all that care to stop and listen. Some declare that they have caught him warbling grand opera in a clear soprano voice, and others are as insistent that it was a bass.

It probably was a coincidence that this afternoon, during the broadcasting period of the Amy McPherson station in Los Angeles, the Victor pup became religiously inclined and expounded his theories vigorously for some time. He seems to limit his activity to the periods of the Kennedy radio programs, and this is thought by some to be something more than coincidence.

When questioned by a curious shopper the dog indignantly replied, "This is K. H. J., the Times radio station of Los Angeles," which may or may not throw some light on the subject.

MUST HAVE QUIET, COUNCIL ORDERS

Bailiff to Preserve Silence At City Meetings, Is Official Ruling

The long arm of the law has now invaded the hitherto sacred precincts of the City Council chamber, and arguments now before the "city fathers" will be conducted according to Hoyle whoever he may be.

On motion of Councilman C. E. Kimlin, seconded by Councilman Asa Hall, and adopted unanimously, hereafter Chief Fraser will have an officer to act as bailiff at all council meetings, in order to preserve order, it was decided today.

Kimlin became disgusted this morning when conversation in the audience drowned out a motion being read by the city clerk.

Jail Cell Yawns

The mayor informed him that it was one man's job to handle the gavel, without giving attention to the matters that came up for consideration.

Councilman Kimlin's motion will relieve the mayor of some of his arduous duties, and from now on any disrespectful spectator is liable to land in jail down stairs.

Chief Fraser is searching the roster of his force in an endeavor to pick on a man brave enough to tackle the proposition.

WANT MORE ROOM ALONG COLORADO

Petitioners Ask Additional Width on Boulevard to Eagle Rock Line

A petition was presented to the City Council this morning from residents on Colorado street asking that the street be widened an additional ten feet from Glendale avenue to the Eagle Rock city limits. This would make it a 100-foot boulevard.

As improvement work is now under way on this thoroughfare, the status of condemnation proceedings looking toward the additional widening was uncertain and the matter was finally referred to the City Planning Commission for investigation and report. The petition, according to Ben S. Dupuy, carries the signatures of 55.7 per cent of the property owners on the street.

The commission has not set a date for hearing on the petition.

BUSINESS WORLD

By J. C. ROYLE
Special Correspondent to The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1924.

NEW YORK, May 22.—The question of just what the "front porch campaign" of the farmer will amount to this summer, is causing considerable anxiety among those interested in cotton and cotton cloth manufacture. This is not a political question, delegates to the meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers explained today. It concerns the amount of time the cotton growers are going to spend sitting on the porch in the shade this summer, which will have almost as much effect on the size of the crop as the weather of the next few months.

The manufacturers gathered here, however, made no attempt to conceal their disappointment over the real political situation connected with the final passage of the bonus. They feel that the amount of cash which the bonus payments will put in circulation will have little effect in stimulating trade when compared with the possibility that the reduction cannot be made or that if such reductions are made, it will lead to heavy issues of trust certificates and other government financing.

Effect in Future

The manufacturers, however, feel that the effect of the bonus will be more noticeable in the future than in the immediate present and are prepared to continue the activity of their operations as long as circumstances justify them.

As to the cotton situation, the number of pounds of staple produced per acre is falling lower in many of the older cotton belts. This has been due not only to the wearing out of the soil but to the fact that fertilizers were not always intelligently and properly used. The emigration of farm laborers from some sections of the south led to the splitting up of the larger plantations into small tracts. The tenant farmers who work such tracts, it is claimed by cotton men, are prone in some cases, to work on cotton cultivation only until the plants have a start on the weeds. Some use fertilizer and some expend little for this kind of crop assistance. Not all these tenant farmers can be counted on to take drastic and efficient steps against the boll weevil.

Revise Estimates

These things undoubtedly will be factors in determining the size of the 1924 crop and the cotton "pars" on which government estimate forecasts are reckoned are being carefully revised in the light of 1924 conditions. The new land broken to cotton for the first time this year, naturally will not be so widely affected.

The fate of the new cotton crop is becoming of increased importance to the manufacturer of cotton goods since the strong statistical position of the old crop and the heavy export movement on the one hand, and the heavy curtailment of domestic mill production have each practaically been discounted. Nevertheless the movement of manuafcturers toward selling abroad their reserve supplies of cotton not immediately needed, at high spot price levels and buying options for future delivery in its place, was soon checked. Conservative cotton men estimate that a crop two million bales larger than that grown in 1923 will be needed this year. More depends on this year's crop than that of any time since the Civil War.

Position Improves

The position of agriculturists in general has greatly improved in the last two years according to Finley P. Mount, president of the Advance Thresher company. "Meeting competition by lowering production costs," he said, "is the open secret of the most successful manufacturer in the world. This has been followed out in a limited degree by the American farmer through use of better equipment. In my judgment the farm problem is not a problem of price. It is a problem of profits, and profits depend not on price alone but on the clothing and furnishings, business here is maintaining comparatively high levels. It is not up to normal, however, in men's shoes and women's white shoes. The larger department stores report their total sales for the first three weeks of May ahead of the corresponding period of last year. There has been an equally satisfactory increase in the last week in bank clearings which were larger than in any similar period since 1920. Heavy building operations are not expected to show spread between price and cost of production.

"The price of farm products is practically beyond our control. Production costs are largely within our control for they may be reduced by saving labor, by increasing the yield per acre and by reducing the farmers' overhead."

Business In Seattle Keeps at High Level

SEATTLE, May 22.—In practically all lines of retail merchandising and especially in men's material signs of slackening until next winter. The demand for sheet metal work for roofing is particularly in evidence.

Prospects for Peach Crops Are Excellent

By JAMES B. RECORD
Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News.

FORT WORTH, Texas, May 22.—Texas peach prospects are good. One county from which no peaches were shipped last year, this season expects to sell more than was produced in the whole eastern part of the state in 1923. Weather has been almost ideal for fruit and the May "drop" will be small due to the perfect condition of the trees. Grasshoppers are causing some alarm and farmers and state officials are combining to fight back the pests. Demand for farm labor is heavy in all parts of Texas and federal, municipal and county employment agencies are recruiting workers for the grain belt.

High Winds Prevent Flight of Dirigible

LAKEHURST, N. J., May 22.—High winds, arising just as the dirigible J-1 left the naval air station here today on a flight to Philadelphia caused the ship to turn back after it had gone a short distance. The wind loosened an air hole on the bag and made navigation dangerous. It was the first flight the J-1 had attempted since it broke from its moorings mast in January and was damaged in a runaway flight in the storm.

WOOL SALES LIGHT

DENVER, May 22.—With the growers asking 40 to 45 cents a pound for their wool, and buyers offering 32 to 36 cents, only about 10 per cent of the Colorado clip has been sold. Wool pools to hold clips for higher prices are now being formed.

NEW YORK CLOSING

H. J. DUIZEND
For International News Service

NEW YORK, May 22.—The hope that some form of tax relief measure will emerge from the present session of Congress, even though it be merely a fragment of the original Mellon proposal and the belief that it would be signed by the president were reflected today in further recovery of stock exchange issues.

The firmer tone of the market caused the retaking of practically all ground lost in Tuesday's decline, caused by the action of the Senate in overriding the president's veto of the bonus bill. In fact, in some highly speculative issues the rebound carried prices into new low levels.

Trading was active and relatively buoyant at times; particularly during the noon hour when stocks gave a fine demonstration of underlying strength. Practically all types of shares were involved in transactions which gave indications of growing uneasiness among "short" operators. The bear element was cautious.

The majority of stocks resumed upward movements from the start, increasing in momentum until the fourth hour, when reports came from Washington indicating that the treasury department was dissatisfied with the agreement reached by the tax conferees and that Secretary Mellon might advise the president to veto the bill. This chilled the fervor of the bull group and recessions became the order. Nevertheless the list maintained its strong undertone.

Steels, motors, accessories, equipments and oils were prominent in the advance. The latter group gave a pretty good account of itself, considering the increase of 13,300 barrels daily in domestic crude oil production last week. Various specialties became increasingly strong, suggesting the resumption of pool activities. U. S. Rubber common and preferred, however, provided an exception, falling to new low levels. Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke also was heavily sold.

Dividend paying railroad stocks gave further evidence of investment buying. The minor carriers, too, were in improved demand, buying being based upon the practical certainty that no legislation hostile to the railroads will be enacted during the remaining period of Congress' activities.

Call money ruled at 3 per cent.

Bonds were firm, with French government issues in active demand. Cotton and grains were firm.

Stocks continued to display firmness throughout the last hour but the volume of transactions was greatly reduced. Short covering in U. S. Rubber brought about a good rally from the early low. Reductions in the main body of shares were narrow with prices holding close to the day's high levels. The market closed steady.

CHICAGO WHEAT

By International News Service

CHICAGO, May 22.—Grains were firm today, although after the early trading prices fell off somewhat. At the close wheat was ⅛ up to ⅛ down, corn ⅛ @ ⅞ higher and oats unchanged. Firmness at Liverpool resulted in higher wheat at the opening and buying was encouraged by confirmation of reports of needed rain in the wheat belt. Corn, particularly May, was strong in sympathy with the firmness in wheat.

Oats were firm but the price range narrow.

Provisions were dull and featureless.

WEIGH VEGETABLES

TRENTON, N. J., May 22.—Many of the grocers and dealers throughout this state have already begun to trade under the state regulations, effective July 1, which provide that vegetables and fruits shall be traded in by weight instead of dry measure.

WORMS IN PECANS

EL PASO, May 22.—Worms and case borers have begun to appear on pecan trees in some West Texas localities. Otherwise the prospect for a large crop is good, as the trees bloomed profusely.

The United States is not fully alive to the strides Great Britain is making to gain cotton supremacy of the world, according to President Bartlett of the New York cotton exchange, who has returned from abroad on the Olympic. He said: "The weevil situation in this country is serious and should be given immediate attention, not by private interests but by the government to see that we maintain heavy production. If prices continue high Britain will certainly do her own producing and America will lose a valuable cotton customer."

Chevrolet prices have been increased, according to word from Detroit, ranging from $15 to $30. Rickenbacker also announces that a "substantial increase" will be made effective June 1.

At a meeting of Sinclair stockholders, a resolution presented by one of them which approved conduct and negotiations of Mr. Sinclair in regard to the Teapot Dome oil leases was adopted. Sinclair is said to have declared to stockholders that he does not expect abrogation of his lease, but that if it is cancelled, the loss to his company will not be more than $5,000,000.

Although Republic Iron and Steel has reduced wages in the Birmingham district, E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States steel corporation has reiterated his statement that the steel corporation has not considered lower wages. Inquiry at several other steel companies has failed to reveal any wage readjustment is contemplated at this time.

By Southland News Service

LOS ANGELES, May 22.—Steady selling gradually forced Union Oil of California stock down from its open of $125 today to $123.50 within the space of an hour on the Los Angeles stock exchange this morning.

It still maintained its hold on speculative attention. It was rumored that San Francisco interests were back of the buying power that has developed during the past three days.

General Petroleum common was up ¼ point today, opening at $40 while Associated Oil maintained its high of yesterday at $29.50. Holly Development, in the oil list, was steady at $35 and United Oil was ⅛, trading fairly heavily at $25. Union Associates opened at $54.50, but later dropped to $54.

In the mining list, in which interest was at a low ebb, United American was up ½ to .05. Richmond Mining opening up 1 point, dropped back to 17½ and later regained ½ point.

Security Trust & Savings was the only active bank stock, holding firm at $312.

Among the utilities, Los Angeles Gas & Electric preferred stock at ½ point advance over yesterday's high, 87.75 and later advanced still further to $38. Edison 7 per cent opened at $102.50 while Edison common was steady at $101.

LEAVE FOR TRIP TO FOREIGN LAND

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Gillies Will Travel In Europe and Canada In Summer

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Gillies of 1448 Stanley avenue, are leaving tomorrow on a three months summer vacation trip that will include a voyage to England and return, and a visit to some of the principle cities of Canada.

They leave on the Continental limited for New York City, where they will spend a few days before boarding the steamer Tuscania May 31 for Scotland. The boat will dock at Glasgow, Mrs. Gillies' former home, and they plan to spend a short time visiting in that city.

During the summer months, they will travel through England, arriving in Liverpool in the middle of July. On July 18 the steamer Montcalm will be boarded for the return voyage to America. On landing in Montreal, the Gillies will visit friends there, and at Sherbrooke, Mr. Gillies' former home town.

On the return trip to Glendale, stops will be made at Winnipeg, Vancouver, Seattle, and other points of interest. They plan to arrive in Southern California in the latter part of August.

VETS TO OBSERVE FLAG DAY FRIDAY

Flag Day will be observed at the all-day meeting Friday of the W. R. C. and G. A. R. which will be held in the G. A. R. hall on South Glendale avenue. The program has been arranged by the patriotic instructor of the W R. C., Miss Lenore Skelton. The entertainment will include readings, vocal and instrumental selections, all of a patriotic nature.

The G. A. R. post will meet in the morning for their regular monthly business session. This will be followed by the noon dinner and program.

In the afternoon, beginning about 3 o'clock the W. R. C. will convene for a short business session. All members and visiting veterans and W. R. C. members are urged to be present.

FRUIT GROWERS TO HOLD MEETING

Results of Week's Campaign for New Members to Be Discussed Tomorrow

VAN NUYS, May 22.—The week of May 19 to May 23, set aside for a canvass to obtain members of the now forming San Fernando Valley Deciduous Fruit Growers' center, has been productive of decidedly gratifying results, and tomorrow night a mass meeting will be held in the High school auditorium here, when the wind-up will take place and the results will be announced. There will be a discussion of drying methods.

Plans for the new organization include open forum meetings, demonstrations, field tours and extension schools, all for the purpose of improving the yield and quality of San Fernando valley orchards. Special attention will be devoted toward the lowering of cost of production. It is believed that a very large majority of the growers will become interested in this organization as much of its success depends upon a large and representative membership.

Amusement Center Is Opened for Season

TUJUNGA, May 22.—Tujunga's outdoor amusement center, the Garden of the Moon, opened the third season Saturday night to one of the largest crowds ever handled at the popular dance pavilion. Parking space in the auto grounds was crowded but well handled by the attendants.

Weather on the opening date was perfect for the occasion and motor parties from nearby towns in the Verdugo hills and the San Fernando valley took advantage of the entertainment features offered by the new management of the Garden of the Moon.

During the summer, several concessions will be operated on the grounds and plans have been made for the entertainment of automobile picnic parties. Picnic ground conveniences will be maintained on the grounds next to the dance pavilion. The swimming pool will be open all day and will probably have a swimming instructor in attendance, as was the case last year.

Boy Scout Troop to Install New Officers

TUJUNGA, May 22.—Troop No. 2 of the Tujunga Boy Scouts of America will install officers and receive new members at a meeting to be held tonight at the Tujunga Community church. These ceremonies will follow the monthly dinner of the Men's Brotherhood of the church, the organization which is sponsoring the new troop.

Deputy Scout Commissioner M. F. Gilmer, of Tujunga, attended the recent meeting of the Verdugo Hills council of Scouts, in Glendale.

With the merging of the Lone Scouts, a similar organization of boys, with the Boy Scouts of America, the membership of the latter organization has been increased to 660,811, according to a recent announcement from New York. Of this total, 512,814 are scouts, 19,106 are scoutmasters, 63,597 are troop commissioners and 34,410 are councilmen.

Hospital Is Planned For Eagle Rock Soon

EAGLE ROCK, May 22.—Plans for a receiving hospital in the northeast section of Los Angeles are under way, according to R. C. Blackmer, local real estate man. The Northeast Realty board is in a measure sponsoring the project, he states, and recently had the pleasure of hearing J. Freeman discuss the advantages and possibilities of such an institution.

Due to the wide territory covered by Los Angeles, Mr. Blackmer points out, a receiving hospital in this district is a vital need, as a measure of additional safety to the populace.

Order New Chevrolet For Montrose Agency

MONTROSE, May 22.—The Stewart Motor Car company, Montrose and Honolulu avenues, have ordered one of the latest Chevrolets, for which they are agents, to place on display in their salesrooms. This is a sport model and has many new features incorporated with the well-known Chevrolet qualities, according to the agents.

George Aiken has been appointed Tujunga representative of the firm. Mr. Aiken formerly was manager of the Garden of the Moon dance pavilion in Tujunga.

DE MOLAYS WILL MEET AT DINNER

Members Advisory Council To Be Banquet Guests At Masonic Hall

The regular monthly dinner of the Glendale Chapter of De Molay will be held tonight at the Masonic temple on South Brand boulevard. The affair will be in honor of the advisory council, and special invitations have been extended to the members to attend.

There will be no degree work put on after the dinner tonight, as has been customary in the past, and the entire evening will be given over to the banquet, declares Cullom Heffington, master councilor. Speeches from the advisers and various officers will make up the program for the night.

Special entertainment will be provided by the Glee club and a DeMolay orchestra. Masons have been invited to attend the dinner.

Big Bear Reported In Sequoia Sector

THREE RIVERS, May 22.—Although there is but one record of a grizzly bear being killed in this locality since 1850, Foreman James Clark, who is supervising construction of a road in Sequoia National Park, declares he saw a huge monster of the species near Moro Rock recently.

This survivor of a supposedly extinct species in California appeared feeding on a green spot below the road and in the eyes of Small and his men assumed the proportions of a buffalo. Small, who has lived in Yellowstone Park, declares the bear was the largest he had ever seen. It appeared at the camp "dump" later in the evening and drove away several brown bear which have been in the habit of feeding from the refuse.

This bear also was observed by Chief Park Ranger Guy Hopping last year, who reported that a monster animal was roaming the forest.

Judge Walter Fry, park naturalist, says the only grizzly to fall victor to a hunter was one which Joe Palmer, a prospector, killed on the old Blossom ranch in this vicinity in 1855.

Swami Returns From Successful Trip East

LA CRESCENTA, May 22.—Swami Paramananda Ananda Ashrama returned yesterday from Boston where he has been for the last few weeks. He will hold the regular Thursday evening service at Ashrama as usual and will be pleased to see his old followers in attendance.

An extensive building campaign is planned for the summer when all additions needed will be added to the extensive quarters of the Vedanta Centre.

Now the ban is lifted, the roads are open to Vedanta Centre and the usual Sunday services will be resumed. This week's subject for Swami's service will be "Constructive Thinking and Serving." The thinking public are cordially invited to attend these services.

Fire Break In Hills Will Protect Valley

LA CRESCENTA, May 22.—Pack trains of the old desert type, real burros, started up the new road camp located at Balridge's ranch, yesterday morning. This camp will be headquarters for the road crew who have started work on the ninety foot fire break at the top of the Verdugo hills south of town.

It is estimated between thirty and thirty-five men will be employed in this work, which, when completed, will protect the Burbank section as well as this valley.

Talk Forming Central Avenue Association

BURBANK, May 22.—Steps are being taken to organize a Central Avenue Improvement association, as the prelude to a united effort to push forward this artery of travel. A business block will follow in the near future, is the assurance of those behind the project. A petition has been presented to the City Trustees for permission to operate a bus line on this avenue. John A. Sommer is to head the Improvement association, it is understood.

SCHOOL PAGEANT WILL BE STAGED

La Crescenta Valley Folks To See Entertainment Given by Pupils

LA CRESCENTA, May 22.—The greatest pageant ever staged in La Crescenta valley will take place on Friday, May 23. This stupendous undertaking will be staged for the benefit and entertainment of the parents and their friends of the entire valley, and it will give every school child an opportunity to parade his or her charms before an admiring audience. It will take the parents and friends back to the fairy dreamland of their childhood.

Trip 'Round World

Then, coming back to modern times, if you wish to travel on the magic carpet o'er the world, visit the school on Friday, and you will be whisked away to far-off lands, where the people, in their quaint native costumes, will dance for you their own folk dances.

The inner man will be catered to by the concessionaires, who will sell you ice cream, hot dog sandwiches, pop, or any carnival commodity, and the balloon man will be on hand, too.

This pageant is going to be so important and popular that the La Crescenta branch of the Los Angeles County Free Library will not open from 2 to 4, its regular Friday afternoon time, but from 5 to 7, giving the parents and kiddies time to see the pageant and get their books in on time.

School will begin at 8 a. m. Frday morning, to give the children their school hours. The track meet in the morning will be in the nature of physical education work.

Queens of Festival

The reigning queens of this great outdoor festival will be Walborg Heinze, May queen; Helen Mead, queen of the flowers; Jean Angier, fairy queen. The queen's butterfly attendants are all from the eighth grade, being Helen Haskins, Melba Bronton, Marian Wyant, Marjorie Wildback and Connie Angier. In the carnival of the flowers these human posies will be from the lower grades of the Montrose and La Crescenta schools. A triple Maypole winding, under direction of Miss Sara Conlin, will be a feature of the day's festivities.

The proceeds from the concessions will be used to defray expenses incurred by renting costumes for between 200 and 250 children. The program will start about 11 a. m., Friday, at La Crescenta schoolhouse.

PUPILS PLAN TO PRESENT COMEDY

'Cinderella' Will Be Staged Twice by Students of Glendale Avenue

"Cinderella," a comedy based on the familiar fairy tale, is to be presented by the members of the A-8 class of Glendale Avenue school on the nights of May 23 and 24 and a matinee performance on Saturday afternoon, May 24, in the school auditorium.

Leading parts will be taken as follows: Cinderella, Beatrice Smith; the prince, Olin Stoddard; the king and queen, Edward Siple and Jean Williams; court fool, Roper Crawford; fairy godmother, La Verne Wolfram; godfather, Franklin Wolcott; the proud sisters, Portia Little and Jean Ashby; gallant knights, Paul King, Jack Roudebush, John Diederich, Robert Bartlett; cruel step-mother, Josephine Creighton;; beggar boy, Glenn Rohrbaugh.

Gorgeous Costumes

Gorgeous costumes are in readiness for the court ball, and dainty fairies will dance in the moonlight to add enchantment to the royal romance.

The new curtains for the stage are to be in place and will be used for the first time at this class play.

The class teachers who are devoting many extra hours toward the directing and other details to insure the success of the presentation are Misses Ruth Haveman, Gladys Sharpe, and Messrs. H. E. Bremer and J. F. McMaster.

Funds Gone, School Closes; Kids Happy

LOS ANGELES, May 22.—Because funds have been exhausted, public schools in the Inglewood and Garvey districts have been ordered closed Friday by County Superintendent Keppel. There is no money to pay the teachers or to maintain the buildings. As a result 1700 children in the Inglewood district and 950 in the Garvey district will have an extra three weeks' vacation. The fund shortage is due, according to Superintendent Keppel, to the enormous growth in enrollment.

Thaw Gives Former Wife Daily Income

NEW YORK, May 22.—Finally cornered by newspapermen who had searched in vain for him all day long, Harry K. Thaw, slayer of Stanford White, and recently released from a sanitarium when a jury found him sane, announced he had made arrangements to pay his former beautiful chorus girl wife, Evelyn Nesbit, $10 a day for the rest of her life.

ENROLLMENT LIST LARGE AT START

Twenty-eight Pupils Enroll in Ten Days at New Music School Here

With the enrollment of twenty-eight pupils during the first ten days the school has been in operation, Albert Strauss, proprietor of the Strauss School of Popular Music, 103½ South Brand boulevard, states that he is more than gratified with the reception he has received here, and believes that his selection of Glendale from among all other towns in Southern California as the place in which to open his school has been fully justified.

Mr. Strauss, a graduate of the Metropolitan College of Music of Cincinnati, O., spent six months looking for a location in the southern part of the state before deciding to open in Glendale.

"I chose Glendale because it is the fastest growing city in America," he stated this morning, "and I want my school to grow with the city."

Instruction Staff

In addition to Mr. Strauss, who supervises all instruction and gives piano lessons, the staff consists of instructors on the following instruments: Miss Emma Allen, saxophone; Miss Kathleen Ross, eccentric dancing; Earl Porter and Edwrad Wood, banjo and piano.

Under the system followed at the school, Mr. Strauss teaches pupils to read music and play "ragtime" in from ten to twenty lessons. To introduce his course in Glendale, he has made a special introductory price of $18 for twenty lessons.

"We have been doing fine," said Mr. Strauss, "and the number of pupils enrolled is far beyond my expectations. All of the instructors are enthusiastic over their work here, and we expect to develop in Glendale one of the leading institutions of its kind in Southern California.

KIDDIES PREPARE FOR FAIRY PLAY

Pupils of Mrs. Nanno Woods to Present 'Snow White and Seven Dwarfs'

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," to be presented Friday night, May 23, by the pupils of the Woods' School of Klever Kiddies in the Tuesday Afternoon club theatre at 8 o'clock, is an elaborate dramatic and dancing production, it is declared.

Mrs. Nanno Woods, director and teacher, has gone to considerable expense in arranging for the production. Special sets have been designed, elaborate costumes made and appropriate electrical effects arranged for.

Based on Fairy Story

The play is based on the lovely old fairy story of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." The four leading characters are portrayed by children of ability; Snow White is taken by Dorothy Gardner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Gardner; the Mother Queen is portrayed by Margaret Graham, whose dramatic ability is appreciated by her high school classmates; Carl, the hunter, is represented by Margaret Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Campbell. The young and handsome prince finds an amazingly clever exponent in Josephine Moore. Another "star" that should be mentioned is Joseph Taylor, who takes a prominent role.

Several Hollywood motion picture directors will be present, it is announced by Mrs. Woods.

Each child in attendance will be given a free gift during the evening's entertainment.
